Labor Party Is Challenged By Tories on Steel Issue

Debate on Program Set After Attlee Says Nationalizing Action Will Stand

London, March 6 (AP).—Winston Churchill's Conservatives today challenged the shaky Labor Government to immediate battle on the issues of housing and state ownership of the iron and steel industry.

The Tories flung down the gauntlet after Prime Minister Clement Attlee told the new House of Commons his regime plans to go ahead on the iron and steel program.

Earlier, in all the regalia of tradition, King George had read to the opening session of the new Parliament the Labor Government's policy speech which omitted all mention of further nationalization or socialist measures.

2 Amendments Offered

Churchill called a meeting of the Conservative Party "shadow cabinet" a few minutes after Attlee had finished speaking.

This group challenged the Labor Government by deciding to offer two amendments to the standard government motion for approval of the King's speech.

One amendment will express regret that the speech "contains no reference to the future of the iron and steel industry."

The second amendment will say that there is a "continuing decline" in the number of new houses built each year by the Labor Government, and that the King's speech "contains no indication that the government intends to take more effective measures to deal with the situation."

Churchill Speaks Today

If the Conservatives press the issue to a vote of confidence and win, the government might have to resign. This would force a new national election on the heels of the February 23 balloting in which Labor was returned to power with a precarious seven-seat majority.

Attlee said the debate on the King's speech will go on until next Monday. The Conservative amendments may be called up any time between now and then. Churchill will lead off for the opposition in the resumed debate Tuesday.

Tradition requires a British government to quit whenever it is defeated in Commons on a major issue. However, the definition of what constitutes a major issue has never been committed to paper.

The Attlee government might take the view that neither of the Conservative amendments to the King's speech fills the bill. If it cannot defeat these, however, its days would be numbered.

The program, disclosed in King George's forenoon address to Parliament which was prepared by the Labor Party, indicated a broad bid to the Liberal Party for its

Athens, Greece, March 6 (U.P.)—Nicholas Plastiras' moderate leftists tenaciously held to a slim lead tonight, but fell far short of a majority, nearly complete, unofficial election returns showed.

So badly split was the vote among five parties that Greece appeared heading for more coalition governments and periodic crises, and possibly a new election next summer.

With about 1,500,000 of yesterday's 1,800,000 votes counted, the unofficial tabulations were:

National Progressive Union of the Center, led by Nicholas Plastiras (moderate left)—355,000—23.67 percent.

Democratic Socialist Party, George Papandreous (center)—217,000, 14.47 percent.

The rest of the vote was scattered among the Independent Political Front (rightist) of Constantine Maniadakis; the National Union Party (center) of Panayiotis Kanellopoulis; the National Party (center) of Gen. Napoleon Zervis, and the New Royalists (rightist) of Spyros Markezines.

Rural votes from regions ravaged by the guerillas during the civil war swamped the Communist-supported Democratic Front of John Sophianopoulos, which had spurted ahead last night. His party dropped to a poor fourth.

In the 1946 elections Tsaldaris' party alone won 60 percent.

Caretaker Premier John Theotokis warned that "the real issue (in the election returns) is not to know the number of votes, but the number of seats gained by each party" under the proportional representation system.

Tydings Asks That U. N. Call Arms Parley

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A resolution calling on the United Nations to sponsor an international conference "to achieve world disarmament, on land, on sea and in the air" was introduced in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) sent the resolution to the desk and said he will ask for early consideration by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"If such a conference of all nations is convened in good faith, I believe it would have a 50-50 chance of success," Tydings later told newsmen.

The Marylander, who has introduced previous resolutions calling for the President to sponsor a world parley, said persons "in high places" had suggested the United Nations ought to call it.

He said both propositions will now be before the Foreign Relations Committee. He will press for a hearing after the ECA authorization bill clears the Senate, he said.

The new measure "requests" the United Nations to invite the governments of all nations to send representatives to the conference, "charged with the single duty of entering into an understanding and agreement to achieve world disarmament . . ."

Bacteriological warfare and poison gas warfare would be specifically included. Tydings argued it is not enough to merely seek

Truman to Leave By Yacht Sunday On Key West Trip

President Truman will leave here Sunday for Key West, Fla., traveling on the yacht U.S.S. Williamsburg. He expects to be away about three weeks.

Eben Ayers, assistant White House press secretary, said yesterday that Mr. Truman will be accompanied only by members of his staff. He said that the Williamsburg was scheduled to arrive at Key West Thursday, March 16, and would tie up at the Navy's submarine base.

A Navy destroyer, which will accompany the Williamsburg, will take along five reporters, a photographer, and a radio man. Other reporters and photographers will go to Key West by rail or plane.

Another 'Confession' Wrung From Ex-Aide at U. S. Legation

London, March 6. (U.P.)—The Communists wrung another confession today from Michael Shipkov, the Bulgarian employe of the American Legation in Sofia who told the world how Communists torture an innocent man until he confesses anything to end his agony.

Dispatches of the Russian Tass news agency and the Bulgarian official agency from Sofia said Shipkov and four other Bulgarians were put on trial as spies today. All pleaded guilty, the dispatches said.

Shipkov in court repudiated the amazing 8000-word document that told how he had been tortured last August after his first arrest. The State Department in Washington published the document Sunday.

The Bulgarian agency said Shipkov today asserted he had given "false and calumnious information about the attitude of government organs (police and questioners) toward himself."

Shipkov testified that, after having been hidden in the American Legation for six months, he was arrested as he tried to escape the country across the Turkish frontier.

"What was the conduct of our government after your (second) arrest (in February)?" the prosecutor asked.

"Very good," Shipkov replied, according to the agency.

"Were there any tortures?"

"No. A very humane attitude."

The Bulgarian agency said the 39-year-old Shipkov, a legation translator, confessed in court that he spied for the United States and Britain for six years.

Today's "confession"—like Shipkov's original indictment, which the Bulgarians published February

Illness Cancels Birthday Party For Mrs. Norton

Representative Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), on the eve of her seventy-fifth birthday, was reported in "satisfactory" condition at Naval Hospital in Bethesda yesterday.

She was taken to the hospital Saturday with influenzal pneumonia. Her birthday is today.

Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician, reported "her temperature has responded to therapy and her general condition is satisfactory."

Mrs. Norton's illness canceled plans for a luncheon today in her honor in the Speaker's dining room at the Capitol. Mrs. India Edwards, women's director of the Democratic National Committee, had planned the party.

Lewis Offers $1 Million to UAW as Loan

By The Associated Press

John L. Lewis, flushed with victory after the long coal strike, yesterday offered a million-dollar loan to help a CIO union win new contracts from Chrysler and General Motors.

Lewis wrote Walter Reuther, head of the big United Auto Workers Union, that wage-welfare improvements in coal were fought by money interests that are linked with "the financial group that dominates" car-making.

The miners' union boss, having set a $1.40 daily increase goal for other labor leaders, thus put cash on the line to help the fight for gains in other industries.

Money help from AFL and other CIO unions for Reuther also was invited by Lewis. He wrote Reuther this aid is needed so "your union may be assured, beyond peradventure, of success in its present struggle."

In Detroit, a UAW spokesman said Reuther would have no comment on Lewis' offer until it is received officially. Reuther is at home ill with a cold, but he is expected to be able to address a mass meeting of Chrysler strikers this afternoon.

Reuther is in the midst of a long strike for worker pensions at the Chrysler Corp. The 90,000-man walkout began its eighth week yesterday. It was estimated the workers have lost 35 million dollars in wages so far and Chrysler more than 250 million dollars worth of business.

The Auto Workers union contract with General Motors expires in May. Reuther has served demands on GM for wage and pension boosts worth 31 cents an hour per worker.

The help for Reuther was au-

New Coal Flow Brings Big Industry Stimulus

Pittsburgh, March 6 (AP).—Grinning miners got the Nation's vital soft coal pipeline back in operation today, quickly throwing industry's sag into sharp reverse.

Smiles wreathed faces of John L. Lewis' diggers as the bulk of the 372,000 strikers straggled back to the pits under their triumphant pay-boost contract.

Only some 30,000 miners reported for early shifts at approximately a third of the country's bituminous operations. But the back-to-work parade picked up quickly. Coal rolled from mines everywhere before nightfall.

Railroads shuttled gondola and hopper cars into mine fields and right out again with precious fuel to be rushed to areas hard hit by the big coal strike.

Settlement of the 10-month mine contract struggle brought new activity on all fronts. Pittsburgh department stores even reporting an upsurge in sales, though mostly credit.

Industry, brought to the brink of collapse by the strike, generally is expected to return to normal in about 10 days. Here is how the economic picture changed focus overnight:

Steel—Big mills started recalling furloughed workers and boosted fractional coke production back to peak rate. Output is slated to rise as coal becomes available. Three days to three weeks is the estimated recovery time.

VA Hospital Transfer Advocated

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Transfer of about 100 Veterans' Administration hospitals to mental, tubercular and general civilian use under State control, was proposed here last night by the president of the Southeastern Surgical Conference.

Dr. R. J. Wilkinson made the bold proposal in a lengthy address at the Shoreham Hotel in which he also:

1. Rapped the American Medical Association and its members for "lack of progressive leadership" and for a "self-centered and selfish" attitude toward the economic problems of medicine.

2. Said over-specialization in training of doctors, nurses and pharmacists is increasing the cost of medical care.

3. Urged all doctors to make "adjustments" to the problems of the day and offered several concrete suggestions for a "comprehensive program of organized medicine for all the people" commensurate with ability to pay.

The Huntington, W. Va., surgeon said the Federal Government should provide free services only for the service-connected disabled soldier.

Only 20 percent of those now being treated in VA hospitals, he said, fall into this category.

Suggests Blue Cross

The remaining 80 percent of nonservice-connected disabled servicemen should be "protected" under a nonprofit insurance plan such as Blue Cross, he said.

Citing the 130 VA hospitals and the 44 others under construction at an "approved" cost of more than a billion dollars, Dr. Wilkinson said:

"It is my firm belief that if every post of the American Legion could be made acquainted with the facts pertaining to the enormous cost and waste of the taxpayers' money, as well as the impetus to socialism, the VA is providing, they would show their real Americanism by condemning any such program."

He called for a sharp consolidation of enough veterans institutions to care for service-connected cases and urged that the remaining hospitals, not in full operation or in process of construction, be given to the States with the stipulation they be operated as State institutions to "replace the antiquated fire traps now in use."

Cites Deficiency

Speaking on the opening day program of the four-day conference, attended by nearly 1000 surgeons, Dr. Wilkinson asked:

"Instead of building other veterans' hospitals that are unnecessary, why not through the States, and on a purely State level transfer the now-appropriated money to the medical colleges, private and/or State-owned, with the idea of meeting their present deficiency?"

By thus spreading the tax dollar between civilian hospital and medical education needs, he explained, further Federal aid and control could be averted.

He bitterly attacked the "alluring $50 consultation bait" that VA hospitals pay many physicians today. He dubbed this "hush or good will money" and said "it is evident that herein lies the reason for the

Corning School Plan Gives Directors City-Wide Scope

By Elsie Carper

A plan for sweeping reorganization of elementary school administration is scheduled to be presented to the Board of Education today by School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning.

The proposal, in line with one of the major recommendations of the Strayer survey on District schools, would wipe out the present geographical administration of elementary schools.

At present the city is divided into nine elementary school districts, five white and four Negro, with a divisional director in charge of each.

Approval of the full board is required to make the change effective.

First, however, it must be considered by the board's personnel committee, which will meet at 3 p. m. today, with the proposal listed on its agenda.

R. I. Ave. Apt. For Negroes to Cost $4 Million

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Three new elevator-type apartment houses, exclusively for Negro occupancy and containing a total of 549 units, are to be built in the District, it was learned yesterday.

They are included among 26 all-Negro apartment housing projects approved for financing in recent months by the Federal Housing Administration. The 26 projects, almost all of them in the District, contain 2500 units.

Largest of the three elevator-type apartment houses to be built will be an eight-story, 413-unit structure at 1300 Rhode Island ave. ne. It will cost between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000.

The other elevator-type projects are: The Holmead, a 72-unit building, on Holmead pl. nw., and The Holly House, 64 units, on Holly st. nw.

Additional details on the smaller projects were not available last night.

However, in discussing the big 413-unit project to be erected on Rhode Island ave. ne., one news source said he believed it to be the biggest project of its type ever attempted in the east.

"I don't think they've ever put up anything like this, even in New York City," he said.

Building plans provide ground space for stores and may include underground garages.

Soviet Walks Out Of United Nations Children's Fund

Lake Success, March 6 (NYHT). The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund—a non-political body that feeds children and mothers on both sides of the Iron Curtain—was hit by big power politics today when Russia and two satellites walked out over the Chinese issue.

Today's meeting—a session of the 26-country executive board—marked the fourteenth time the Russians have boycotted or deserted a U. N. organ since January 13 in protest over the presence of a delegate from Nationalist China. Czechoslovakia and Poland marched out with the Russians today.

Russia never has figured as a giver or taker from the fund. Czechoslovakia, however, is the tenth-largest contributor to the fund, and has received large benefits. Poland is the fourth-largest beneficiary of fund work.

Felt 'Obsessed' To Inject Air, Sander Asserts

Manchester, N. H., March 6 (AP). Dr. Hermann N. Sander today testified "something snapped" when he saw the expression on Mrs. Abbie Borroto's face—leading him to inject air into her even though he knew she was dead.

Under stiff cross-examination by Attorney General William L. Phinney, the 41-year-old doctor charged with murder admitted that making such injections "doesn't make sense," but said he felt "impelled or obsessed to do something."

Dr. Sander is accused of killing the cancer victim by injecting 40 cubic centimeters of air into her veins to end her suffering. The prosecution contends it might have been intended as an "act of mercy."

Dr. Sander said he was influenced by "the expression on her face—the long suffering—also the suffering of her husband."

"The expression of her face touched me off," he said. "What I did doesn't make sense."

Shortly, Dr. Sander told the all-male jury trying him:

"I have never done anything to harm any patient."

Quickly, Prosecutor Phinney asked:

"Have you ever been of the opinion a patient might be better served by being dead?"

"I have never thought that," replied Dr. Sander.

The accused doctor testified in firm tones and held the same composure that he has maintained throughout the trial, now in its third week.

Dr. Sander insisted under cross-examination that he "never had any intention of killing Mrs. Borroto"—that "I knew she was dead."

"Yet," asked Phinney, "you had this obsession to pump air into this poor dead soul?"

"That's right," replied the doctor in clipped tones.

Rich Uranium Mines Reported In Mozambique

Johannesburg, South Africa, March 6 (U.P.)—A two-year-old secret came to light today with reports of mining operations on a new African uranium deposit which may rival the big Belgian Congo source.

The reports said the uranium was discovered accidentally about two years ago in Portuguese territory by M. C. de Carvalho, a prospector searching for carborundum.

The discovery was in Mozambique, about 25 miles from Tete on the Zambesi River.

Exploitation options were said to have been obtained for the British government and France. About 50 tons of the ore were reported to have already been shipped to Britain and another 62 tons to France.

House Tentatively Approves Hawaii Statehood Measure

The House, which on Friday passed a bill to grant statehood to Alaska, tentatively approved a similar measure for Hawaii yesterday.

The bill was approved by voice vote. The action is subject to a final passage rollcall today.

Prospects for both bills are uncertain in the Senate, which has not acted. Opposition has been stronger there than in the House.

Only a few House members opposed the Hawaiian bill. One of them was Representative Cox (D., Ga.) who told his colleagues:

"As far as Hawaii is concerned, we are creating a State that we know is Communist-controlled. When we admit Hawaii we are accepting into the sisterhood of States a community that Harry Bridges dominates as completely as if it were his child."

Bridges, who denies he is a Communist, is head of the West Coast longshoremen's union which has staged Hawaiian dock strikes.

Representative Cooley (D., N.C.) said he could find no merits to arguments that the Nation's defenses would be strengthened if Hawaii were admitted into the union.

Delegate Farrington (R., Hawaii) and a score of House members urged passage. Farrington said the people of Hawaii feel they were promised statehood when the islands were admitted as a Territory 52 years ago.

Representative Larcade (D., La.), who headed a subcommittee which urged statehood after a visit to Hawaii in 1946, said he could see no reason for denying statehood to the islands on racial grounds.

He said he had observed intermingling "in perfect harmony" of persons of many Asiatic and Polynesian extractions, and added: "If

Indications Of Speedy Verdict Fade In Late Hours

Judith's Lawyers Decline to Sum up; Russian Love-Crazed, His Attorney Holds

New York, (Tuesday) March 7 (AP).—A Federal jury was locked up early today after twice reporting itself unable to reach agreement in the spy conspiracy trial of Judith Coplon and Valentin A. Gubitchev.

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan told the six men and six women at 12:28 a. m. (EST) they would be sent to a hotel for the remainder of the night and would resume deliberating at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday.

Earlier, the jurors had reported inability to agree but had resumed deliberations in hope of reaching a verdict.

Foreman John Hopfer told Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan shortly after 11 p. m.:

"The members of the jury would like to deliberate a little longer on this, if permissible."

Ryan immediately gave permission.

"I don't want you to feel that you are under pressure from the court," he said.

Miss Coplon, former Justice Department aide, and Gubitchev, Soviet engineer suspended from his United Nations post, are charged with plotting to transmit United States defense secrets to the Russians.

Jury Asks More Information

Shortly before midnight the jury asked further information on the charge against Miss Coplon, and then resumed deliberations at 11:56 p. m.

The jurors reported their initial failure to agree at 10:50 p. m. At that time they had been deliberating three hours and nine minutes. They got the case at 4:34 p. m. (EST) but spent part of the intervening time at dinner and listening to portions of testimony being reread in the courtroom.

When the jurors entered the courtroom at 10:49, Judge Ryan asked them:

"Do you have any report to make? Have you reached a verdict?"

"No, we have not reached a verdict," said John Hopfer, the foreman.

Judge Ryan said he did not want to urge them to hurry in their deliberations and he had in mind "putting you in a hotel" overnight. He then suggested they retire to the jury room for a moment to discuss the matter while he waited in court.

The trial, attracting international interest, marks the first time in the cold war that a Russian citizen has been brought into a United States court as an accused spy.

Chief Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., charged in his summation that Gubitchev, 33, and the 28-year-old Miss Coplon met repeatedly in New York for purposes of espionage and nothing else.

Speaking before a packed courtroom he told the jury:

Martin Hutchinson, Byrd Foe, Is Named by Truman to FTC

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday named a political rival of Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) to the Federal Trade Commission.

His selection was Martin A. Hutchinson, 57-year-old Richmond attorney who ran unsuccessfully against Byrd for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate in 1946.

Byrd, who is one of Mr. Truman's bitterest opponents within the party, would not comment on the appointment. Friends said they do not expect him to raise any public objection to Hutchinson at this time.

However, the Senate Commerce Committee, which handles FTC nominations, is expected to take some time in considering Hutchison's appointment.

Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) told a reporter he does not know when the committee will set hearings.

Byrd played a role in senatorial rejection of three of Mr. Truman's nominations to major posts last year. In two of them he took a direct hand.

Hutchinson, a veteran of World War I, was named to succeed the late Ewin L. Davis on the Trade Commission. He would fill out a term that expires in September, 1953.

He has served as secretary of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and from 1935 to 1939 was secretary of the Democratic State Central Committee. In recent years he has opposed the dominant State Democratic organization headed by Byrd.

He has described himself as a "liberal, independent Democrat" and a supporter of the "liberal,

New Agency Shift Plans Are Slated

By The Associated Press

President Truman passed the word to Democratic legislative leaders yesterday that he will send "five or six" Government reorganization plans to Congress later this week.

The President discussed his proposals with House Speaker Rayburn, Vice President Barkley, Senate Democratic Leader Lucas and House Democratic Leader McCormack at their regular Monday morning conference.

They would not say what proposals Mr. Truman will send up. But Rayburn said he doubted they would include one to set up a new Department of Public Welfare.

Under a general Government reorganization law, the President can draft proposals for consolidating and shifting Federal agencies. These must be submitted to Congress. They become effective unless the House or Senate adopts a resolution of disapproval.

Committee Assailed

Meanwhile, a general accounting officer accused the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report of "abysmal ignorance" about the Federal Government's accounting system.

Frank Weitzel, assistant to the Comptroller General, also told the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee that the committee lacks a desire to learn about the system and the progress being made toward approving it.

The expenditures committee earlier heard from Dr. Robert L. Johnson, chairman of the citizens' group, that "after 29 years of poor accounting, it seems to me obvious that Congress should step in and clean up the accounting mess once and for all."

Johnson set forth his views in a letter to Robert L. McCormick, research director for the Citizens' Committee, who read it to the Senators.

The Expenditures Committee is studying a bill to overhaul the Government's accounting procedures and establish a new Office of Accountant General in the Treasury Department.

Work on New Procedures

Comptroller General Lindsay Warren, Budget Director Frank Pace and Treasury Secretary Snyder now are working together in an effort to improve accounting procedures. They oppose the bill.

Weitzel said the results being achieved "are more than sufficient to justify continuance of the cooperative effort."

Johnson said the agencies involved are "the same ones which—despite significant gaps in their authorities—have been responsible for the Government's accounting for the last 29 years."

The citizens' group was formed to press for action on the Hoover Commission recommendations for reorganizing the executive branch of the Government. Hoover is scheduled to testify at 10 a.m., Tuesday.

The mass dismissal of Veterans' Administration hospital employes, scheduled to begin Friday, was attacked yesterday by the American Psychiatric Association.

A statement by the group's counsel said that the "association strongly maintains that unless this action is prevented, medical care of nervous and mentally disabled, veterans will deteriorate below accepted adequate standards."

In Washington, the VA said it had notified all VA hospitals, regional offices and other units of the new personnel ceilings, which will bring about a reduction of 7800 jobs by April 10.

VA said it will be up to each unit to make its own adjustments. Several hundred employes in the Washington area are expected to get the 30-day dismissal notices this week, effective April 10.

Of the total cut, about 3000 jobs are in VA hospitals and homes, the agency said.

The American Psychiatric Association statement, signed by President George S. Stevenson, said "Government procedure prevents VA officials from telling Congressmen directly of the disastrous results which will follow."

"Contemplated reduction in personnel will result in imn.ediate deterioration of medical care to veterans and discourage remaining personnel in performance of their duties. This kind of false economy always results in less effective treatment, which ultimately means greater expense to the taxpayer."

At the Winter VA Hospital in Kansas, members of the professional staff, after receiving word that 200 would be fired there, drew up a letter of protest. It charged that the reduction "will definitely eliminate opportunities to cure some of the patients now in our hospital," and that it "is a step backward to a custodial institution" where sick persons are only hidden from the public.

The United Public Workers Union, which claims members in all the New York City VA installations, also protested the layoff program. It announced that a picket line was being placed in front of the VA regional office.

Broun Prize Cash To Combat Taft

By the United Press

Herbert Block, editorial cartoonist for The Washington Post, who won a $500 Heywood Broun award, donated it yesterday to a campaign to defeat Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

Block, formerly of Ohio, contributed the money to the campaign of Henry M. Busch, head of the social science division of Cleveland College and one of six candidates for the Ohio Democratic senatorial nomination. He wrote Busch he wanted the money to go to "the campaign of a fighting liberal."

Vote Change Critics Hit By Humphrey

The national chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), yesterday took issue with two ADA leaders who are bucking the proposed constitutional amendment to junk the electoral college.

The Senator's statement came as the House Rules Committee prepared today to hear opponents of the measure, known as the Lodge-Gossett amendment. The amendment has passed the Senate.

Humphrey said "we ought not to visualize devils and ghosts who may plague us in the future," in referring to statements by Charles LaFollette, ADA's national director, and James Loeb, jr., ADA's executive secretary.

LaFollette and Loeb have been warning labor-liberal groups and Congressmen that the amendment would destroy their present-day influence, would tend to make the Democratic Party, through which ADA has largely worked, more conservative and would set back the liberal cause a generation.

Humphrey told a reporter he doesn't think such statements can be substantiated.

Humphrey, who voted for the amendment, said he doesn't think the amendment would change the present political complexion of the two major parties, that it would offer more incentive to party organizations to work for votes and that both parties would have to pay more, not less, attention to so-called minorities everywhere. The Senator said there is no certainty, as LaFollette and Loeb contended, that the South will continue to be conservative or become even more so, politically speaking.

medical profession's hands-off policy."

Throughout his address Wilkinson made clear his down-the-line opposition to compulsory health insurance or other direct Federal subsidies.

"Being Manhandled"

Through the years, said Wilkinson, the AMA, and in fact, all medical organizations, have been "ultraconservative in all matters except perhaps scientific medicine."

"Economic problems for the most part have been overlooked, and today we are being manhandled by forces that are ruthless and have neither the doctor's nor the patient's welfare at heart," he asserted.

On "overspecialized" medical education, he said: "Our medical colleges through the direction of the AMA, steadily increased the requirements for graduation with the result that most of our boys upon completion of college work are pseudoscientists instead of well-trained practitioners of medicine."

There is little wonder, he asserted, why the young doctor demands such high fees. "The too-wide differential between the income of the general doctor and that of the specialist is one of the causes of our economic upset in medicine," he said.

To insure more general practitioners, he proposed the medical profession require three years' general practice and one year of basic science training before a medical school graduate may apply for resident hospital training in a specialist line.

Dr. Wilkinson said physicians also have "neglected" their responsibility by tolerating the four-year training requirement for practicing pharmacists.

"It is obvious to every thinking physician that the large drug concerns are compounding our prescriptions," he said. "They are doing the experimental work with drugs and through their field agents are largely directing the practice of medicine. All this reflects upon the patients' economy by increasing the cost of medicine and is further bait for the 'Fair Dealers' who are clamoring for Government control."

Another evidence of "our lack of responsibility, he declared, lies in the field of nursing where "we have been content" to allow this segment of medical education be dominated by hospital administrators and "a few super-educated" nurses.

Practical Nurses Needed

There is an urgent need, he said, "for practical nurses trained in the simple art of caring for sick persons patients, and this can be done without previous college work and with only two years' training."

He called for "fearless leadership" by every doctor to combat the "evils that so vitally affect our economic future."

In another address last night, Dr. Elmer Hess of Erie, Pa., and vice chairman of the AMAs council on medical service, contended the differences between physicians and private hospitals can be resolved through "local level" conferences, doctors' willingness to help hospitals in their financial troubles and "if our ultimate goal is not the almighty dollar."

Senators Get Inside Dope on Name Bands

Carter T. Barron of Washington, appearing on behalf of a group of theaters, yesterday gave the dignified Senate Finance Committee an exposition on the differences between "hot" bands, "sweet" bands and "rhumba" bands.

Barron's discussion of name bands came in connection with the pending bill to broaden the Social Security program.

The theater manager objected to a provision under which various theaters would pay the special security payroll tax for each musician.

He appeared on behalf of Loew's Eastern Division, of which he is manager, and on behalf of National Theaters Corp., RKO Theaters, Inc., United Paramount Theaters, Inc., and Warner Brothers Theater Companies.

Barron said the theaters do not hire the musicians as individuals, but the band and music as "a package." Each name band, he pointed out, specializes in its distinctive type of music and the leader pays his musicians a weekly salary.

Idle Now Total 4,684,000, Highest Point Since Aug., 1941

Unemployment figures rose to 4,684,000 in February, highest since August, 1941.

The figure, reported by the Commerce Department yesterday, is an increase of 204,000 over January.

The total does not count those idle because of strikes.

In the Government's statistics, strikers are counted as employed since they have a regular job, even though they are not working at it while on strike.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer said in a statement:

"The slight rise in unemployment between January and February appears to be due mainly to a seasonal increase in the labor force and not to any cutbacks in employment.

"Nonfarm employment seems to be holding steady this year in contrast to last year."

The Census Burea, which prepared the figures, observed that between January and February last year there was a 500,000 increase in the number of jobless, "with nonseasonal cutbacks in employment an important factor in the rise."

The 204,000 rise in unemployment from January to February this year resulted from the fact that 210,000 persons, including midyear school graduates, entered the labor force—and only 6000 new jobs were available immediately.

The 6000 new jobs raised the total of those with regular work to 56,953,000.

The 4,684,000 total of unemployed compares with 5,620,000 in August, 1941.

Increase in Heat Is Ordered For D. C. Buildings and Schools

The District Commissioners yesterday gave permission for the firing of furnaces in District-owned buildings but ordered that coal rationing for commercial users be continued.

They said supplies in Federal yards earmarked for the local government made it possible for them to lift the 68-degree temperature ceiling set for schools and other local agencies.

They pointed out, though, that supplies in some buildings are "quite low" and there may be unavoidable delays in building up stocks due to delivery problems. It was left up to department heads to stretch coal in their bins until deliveries can be made.

After conferring with the Fuel Coordinating Committee, the Commissioners announced that rationing to commercial users will continue until the city's supply is built up.

Dealers' stocks in general are "very low" and can be made to last until normal conditions are resumed "only by prudent management and economy," they said.

They estimated it will take from 7 to 10 days before coal in any quantity is delivered to coal dealers.

Relief, though, was promised churches.

J. Thomas Kennedy, chairman of the fuel committee, said that churches needing coal should notify the fuel committee and an effort would be made to supply them.

The city's experience with conservation in its buildings may result in permanent economies, the Commissioners said. It was pointed out that in many buildings coal was saved "without hardships or injury to occupants."

thorized at a jubilant meeting of Lewis with his top union aides. Loud applause was heard behind the closed doors of the miners' meeting hall for Lewis and his lieutenants, and for Welly K. Hopkins, the union's chief lawyer, who obtained acquittal for the union from court contempt charges.

Lewis is understood to have boasted at the meeting that he had "licked" the strike emergency injunction provisions of the Taft-Hartley law. A court injunction obtained under the law failed to end the coal strike. The 372,000 strikers simply wouldn't work without a contract.

However, the Justice Department said it would go ahead with its appeal of the acquittal decision by Federal District Judge Richmond B. Keech.

Two immediate goals were outlined by Lewis at the policy meeting: (1) Quick resumption of miner pensions and other benefits from the dormant miners' welfare fund, and (2) fast money gains for the 80,000 anthracite, or hard coal miners.

Peace talks for an anthracite contract begin here at 2 p. m. today. Negotiations have dragged along in New York for a 14-week period but they were transferred here in expectation of a fast deal based on the soft-coal contract.

The strike idled 225,000 persons in coal-using industries in addition to the 372,000 United Mine Workers who quit with the chant "no contract, no work." Lewis ended the whole thing yesterday by signing a new contract giving his men a $1.40 daily package each.

A House investigation of the steel industry will get under way April 17, with officials of United States Steel Corp. as initial witnesses, Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) announced yesterday.

What You Say, How You Say It, Can Make You More Popular

A publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique of everyday conversation which can pay you real dividends in both social and business advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, self confidence and greater popularity. The details of this method are described in a fascinating booklet, "Adventures in Conversation," sent free on request.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by what they say and how they say it. Whether in business, at social functions, or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances, there are ways in which you can make a good impression every time you talk.

To acquaint more readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in everyday conversation, the publishers have printed full details of their interesting self-training method in a 24-page booklet which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. The address is: Dept. 7763, Conversation Studies, 1315 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago 5, Ill. A penny postcard will do.—Adv.

Big Four Meeting May Be Arranged

Paris, March 6 (AP).—The possibility of a "Big Four" meeting including Russia will be discussed by the three Western foreign ministers in London soon, French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman said tonight.

An authoritative French source said the American, British and French foreign ministers will meet in London on April 12. But the State Department in Washington and the British Foreign Office said no date had been set. Schuman himself declined to comment on the date. The conference is expected about the time of the annual meeting in London of the Atlantic Pact Council.

Schuman said at a news conference the three foreign ministers will "study the problems of a Big Four meeting."

Replies to Adenauer

He said the three foreign ministers also will discuss the Far Eastern situation, including Japan, relations with Communist China, Indo-China and aid to southeast Asia. It will also review the German problems, he said.

Schuman, who leaves for London Tuesday in connection with the state visit of President Vincent Auriol, said he will discuss all these international questions informally with British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

The French Foreign Minister replied to German criticism of the French-Saar agreement signed here Saturday. The pact calls for French control over the rich Saar coal mines for 50 years, subject to a final German peace treaty.

"This (agreement) is an interim regime between Germany's unconditional surrender and a peace treaty," Schuman said. "Mr. (Chancellor Konrad) Adenauer should know this since his First German Republic itself is only provisional, subject to the final decisions of a peace treaty."

Cites Bonn Constitution

In reply to Adenauer's statement that the French-Saar agreement may cause Germany to reconsider entering a European union, Schuman said:

"Since 1947 France alone has administered the Saar. This state of fact has the approval of the two other (Western) allies. In the constitution of the Bonn Republic, the Saar was deliberately not mentioned in the future organization of West Germany. No documents mention the Saar, although Berlin, for example, is mentioned."

Schuman said the German peace treaty will certainly be discussed at the London meeting.

Plastiras' Rise Seen Rebirth Of Liberalism

GEN. NICHOLAS PLASTIRAS
. . . "Bold, dashing, old soldier"

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

The resurgence of Gen. Nicholas Plastiras as a vote-getter in Greece was described by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot here yesterday as a significant indication of more militant liberalism among the Greeks.

Mrs. Pinchot, who became acquainted with Plastiras during several unofficial fact-finding missions to Greece since 1946, declared that "the bold, dashing, old soldier" is actually "the one authentic leader of the Greeks."

Plastiras' emergency as a political force in Greece becomes even more meaningful, Mrs. Pinchot said, when it is known that the general's party fought a well-heeled opposition in the Populists under former Premier Constantin Tsaldaris. The conservative Liberals under Sophocles Venizelos also were known to have been well financed.

Plastiras, on the other hand, is himself quite poor, deriving virtually all his political strength from great public popularity. He is regarded as an outstanding hero—a man of complete independence in action, Mrs. Pinchot said.

Mrs. Pinchot, widow of Pennsylvania's former Governor, cited many instances while she was in Greece where citizens struggled against police just to touch Plastiras.

Latest reports from private sources in Athens indicate that Greece's political future will undoubtedly lay in the combined power of Plastiras and Venizelos. Venizelos, although flying the banner of liberalism, is regarded as somewhat more of a politician than a true leader, Mrs. Pinchot indicated.

For this reason, as a politician, Venizelos will probably abandon whatever amenities he may previously have had with Tsaldaris to link his future with popular Plastivas.

Mrs. Pinchot also emphasized that Plastiras no doubt will count heavily for advice on former Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos, a more or less "apolitical" economist and Athens banker.

Sentence Withheld In Exposure Case

Judge James R. Miller withheld sentencing an admitted sex offender yesterday in Bethesda Police Court for two years under condition that he undergo psychiatric treatment.

Church Lands To Be Seized By Poland

Warsaw, March 6 (AP).—Premier Jozef Cyrankiewicz announced to Parliament today that the state will take over large church estates in predominantly Catholic Poland.

The announcement was made two days after Adam Cardinal Sapiewha and Archbishop Stefan Wzszynski of Warsaw, Primate of Poland, were reported to have written President Bierut a letter declaring "a fight against the church, against religion and against God appears more and more closely at hand" in this Communist-ruled country.

Premier Cyrankiewicz said a bill would be presented to Parliament soon, taking over church farms of more than 250 acres. Buildings used for worship and inhabited institutions such as convents and monasteries would not be affected, he added. The law, he said, would empower the government to turn some estates back to the church for administrative purposes.

Income from the seized lands will be put into a fund to help pay pensions and social insurance to "meritorious priests," he added.

"Events have shown that church estates exploited the workers," he declared, "while the income from them has been used without control and for harmful purposes."

Recently, the government took over control of Caritas, the Catholic Church's charity organization.

Philippine Contractor Held for Ransom

Manila, March 6 (U.P.).—Vicente Araneta, 45, wealthy Manila businessman, has been kidnaped and is being held for $50,000 ransom, the Philippines Constabulary reported today.

Mayor Miguel Tano of Tagayta identified the kidnapers as Hukbalahaps, anti-government rebels who have been active since the war.

Araneta was contractor for a government irrigation project at Cavite. Malanio Salgado, foreman of the project, also was kidnaped.

nine votes by failing to call for more nationalization projects.

It was during debate on the King's address that Anthony Eden, deputy Conservative leader, brought the steel issue into the open.

"The country has pronounced against nationalization and in our judgment that goes for iron and steel also," Eden declared.

"There is nothing to be done in the matter of the iron and steel act immediately," Attlee reported, "but the statute is on the statute books and our purpose is to give effect to the acts passed by Parliament."

The Conservatives want the act repealed. Unless this is done, it is effective October 1 and the supply ministry will name a board to run the industry for the state after January 1, 1951.

The government also put out a white paper announcement that it will add twenty million pounds ($56,000,000) to Britain's defense budget this year, but reduce the personnel of the armed forces.

At the same time Attlee accepted full responsibility for the country's security forces, where some newspapers have been demanding a purge as a result of the disclosure that atomic scientist Dr. Klaus Fuchs gave secrets to Russia.

"There has been a great deal of loose talk in the press suggesting inefficiency on the part of the security service," he said. "I entirely deny it."

Clement Davies, Liberal leader of the House, is scheduled to speak Tuesday. His remarks may give a hint of what the Liberals expect to do with their advantageous position gained through Labor's precarious edge over the Conservatives in the February 23 election.

Parliament opened with the traditional pomp and ceremony. Glittering jewels, rich furs and scarlet-trimmed uniforms set the keynote for the pageant that brought thousands of Britons out to see the King and Queen drive from Buckingham Palace to historic Westminster in their gold-bedecked state coach.

ECA Aid to British Oil Industry Held Up Pending Negotiations

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Economic Cooperation Administration told Congress yesterday that the ECA is holding up financing of an expansion of the British oil industry.

Marshall Plan funds for this purpose will be withheld, ECA officials said, pending a "satisfactory outcome" of current State Department negotiations with the British government over its new policy of limiting imports of American companies' oil.

The ECA policy was made known to the House Commerce Committee by Dr. Oscar E. Bransky, chief of the ECA petroleum branch. Bransky said that in the fiscal year 1949, some 80 million dollars was requested for expansion of British companies' overseas operations. They have stated this expansion is not excessive and is designed to meet only their commercial market needs.

But the ECA is unwilling to see the enlargement of any oil capacity if a market for it could be secured only by the invocation of protective or restrictive devices—in other words, if the additional oil produced could not be sold in a free competitive market.

Recently, the British announced a substantial reduction in the amount of oil from American companies that could be sold this year in the sterling area. The ostensible purpose was to save scarce dollars, by substituting oil from British companies.

American oil interests entered a sharp protest, backed by the State Department. Since the first of the year, British-American discussions have been held with a view to modifying the British limitation order.

These discussions, it was understood yesterday, have made considerable progress; indications are the British are willing to make certain interpretations of the order that will allow some additional American oil sales to Britain.

French Reds Threaten Gas, Power Strike

Paris, March 6 (U.P.).—Communist union leaders tonight threatened a strike of gas and electricity workers that might black out most of the nation.

At the same time, non-Communist Paris transport workers moved in to try to smash a Communist-led strike that had crippled bus and subway lines serving five million Parisians.

They acted under police protection after Premier Georges Bidault silenced a violent Communist filibuster in the National Assembly. He staked his government's life by demanding a vote of confidence on a bill to jail labor agitators and saboteurs of United States arms shipments.

A "joint action committee" of utilities leaders met tonight to translate into action a vote of gas and electricity workers favoring by 76 percent a nation-wide strike over wage demands. The deadline was expected to be Thursday.

The Paris transport strike, which began this morning, stopped traffic on 12 of the city's 15 bus lines and kept most of its 2000 buses in the garage.

But non-Communist workers drifted back to their jobs under police protection and by early evening eight subway lines were running again on reduced schedules. Only 95 buses were back in operation.

The army and private lines pressed some 3000 trucks and other vehicles into service, but they moved only a small fraction of the city's population.

Bidault's call for a confidence vote ended a stormy 13-hour debate that capped a violence-marked, three-day Communist attack on the antisabotage bill.

The vote will be taken after the Assembly reconvenes Wednesday. Predictions were that Bidault would win without much trouble, since the Communists are the only ones opposing the bill.

Russians Plan No Exodus, German Says

By Daniel De Luce

Leipzig, March 6 (AP).—Russia will keep an occupation army in East Germany as long as Allied forces are on German soil, a member of the German Communist Politburo said today.

This high East German source denied there was any basis for the frequent rumor that Soviet troops might be withdrawn later this year.

He also denied that the Soviet-sponsored East German government expects to obtain a separate peace treaty from Russia—unless the Allies first conclude such a pact with the Bonn Republic.

His statements were made during an informal two-hour conversation with this correspondent here.

In Berlin non-Communist foreign press representatives are barred from close contact with Eastern government officials. But here the ban has been temporarily lifted to obtain world-wide publicity for the Leipzig Trade Fair. Western correspondents and businessmen were invited to attend the East German exposition.

The Politburo veteran, who declined use of his name, said he saw virtually no chance of the unification of Germany being agreed to by the four occupation powers and the East and West Germans "for several years."

He indicated the East's main political weapon during this interim period would be the "national front," which would strive to harden any feeling of political and economic discontent in West Germany.

When the West Germans' depression is deep enough, he predicted, the Allied powers will be forced to cancel their plans to stay in Germany for a generation.

atomic and hydrogen bomb controls.

He told reporters that since he proposed last month that the President sponsor such a conference he has received nearly 10,000 letters and postcards from people in Europe, Canada, South and Central America and all sections of this country commending the proposal. More than 20 Senators have told him they favor the idea, he said.

The resolution calls for land, sea and air disarmament "except only for such actual occupying forces, with appropriate weapons, and for such agreed period of time, as will be necessary to police the defeated and occupied nations as a result of the recent war, and except only for such armed forces and for such weapons as are to be placed exclusively under the jurisdiction, and except only for such limited forces and limited small arms as are needed to keep law and order within each country, and directly prohibiting the manufacture, storage, and possession of all other weapons, ammunition, and munitions of war, and providing further for the international inspection force authorized and instructed to see that the terms of such world disarmament are rigidly adhered to and carried out

Birth Control Called One Key In Point Four

Birth control and better educational opportunities are the keys to success of United States efforts to improve the lot of underdeveloped countries, says a report released by the Foreign Policy Association.

The point was a central one in an analysis of "Point Four in the World Economy" by Dr. J. B. Condliffe, University of California economics professor.

Other requisites for successful operation of the program, Dr. Condliffe said, include a revision in the thinking of peoples who "now cling desperately to tradition," and a restoration of multilateral trade.

"Point Four" is President Truman's program for raising the standards of backward areas through export of American know-how, backed in some cases with Government-guaranteed capital.

The Foreign Policy Association is a nonprofit group devoted to study of international problems.

Birth Rate Should Fall

Dr. Condliffe held that population increase is a major factor in economic development, and argued that Point Four will not be sure of success unless the peoples of Asia and Africa follow the population pattern of western Europe, where the birth rate has fallen.

"The only way in which to make sure that productivity outstrips the survival rate is to use educational processes to reinforce the desire for improved living standards and so implant in the people for whom economic development is projected the desire to achieve these higher living levels by postponement of marriage, limitation of the birthrate within marriage and the provision of educational opportunities for their children," the economist said.

Meantime, at the Government level yesterday, four nations agreed on a program with aims similar to those of Point Four, applicable to their Caribbean territories.

May Get Point 4 Plans

Representatives of France, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States—member governments of the Caribbean Commission—signed an agreement outlining an intensive project to raise the living standards in the areas.

It calls for development of tourist trade, establishment or improvements in a hurricane-warning system, keeping trade barriers to a minimum, development of interterritorial transportation, industrial diversification, removal of discrimination in sea and air travel, and granting of scholarships.

that is their way of life, that is their business."

The House, which approved the Alaskan statehood bill by a 186-to-146 vote, had agreed in advance to consider the two bills in one package. Leaders did so in an effort to keep partisan politics out of the debate. Alaska is Democratic; Hawaii Republican.

Senator Butler (R., Nebr.) ranking Republican on the Senate Interior Committee, has predicted that both bills will be bottled up there.

A principal Senate argument is that the two Territories would get Senate representation equal to that of States which have many times their population.

All Suspicious

Reds Wary As 2 Reveal FBI Links

By The Associated Press

Testimony that Pittsburgh's Communists have become wary of each other since two of them turned out to be FBI undercover agents was aired before the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday.

George Dietze, 51, an FBI informant in Pittsburgh for nearly 10 years, testified behind closed doors as the House group continued its inquiry into Communist operations. Later, he talked freely with newsmen.

Dietze said that since Matthew Cvetic testified before the committee about two weeks ago, Pittsburgh Communists have become "very careful and look at each other with suspicion."

Cvetic, like Dietze, said he spent years working among Communists while sending regular reports to the FBI.

Cvetic testified as to Dietze's Communist activities, unaware that the latter, too, was an FBI informer.

Jurors Given Coplon Case

you—not one scintilla—that either of these defendants was in love."

Earlier, Abraham L. Pomerantz, summing up for Gubitchev, declared the Russian was a love-crazed married man "on an illicit" adventure with the petite brunette former employe of the Justice Department.

Pomerantz urged the jurors to forget "cold war hysteria" and find both defendants innocent.

Miss Coplon's court-assigned lawyers declined to sum up, just as they declined earlier to call defense witnesses. They expressed confidence a higher court would reverse any conviction.

Neither Miss Coplon nor Gubitchev took the stand.

Miss Coplon faces up to 35 years in prison if convicted. Gubitchev could get up to 15 years. Each could be fined up to $20,000. Miss Coplon was sentenced to 40 months to 10 years following her previous conviction in Washington. She is free in bail.

An hour and five minutes after getting the case, the jurors returned to the big, dimly-lighted Federal courtroom, heard parts of the testimony re-read and took a second look at some of the Government's key evidence—papers found in Miss Coplon's purse after her arrest.

The jury then went to dinner, returned to the courtroom at 8 p. m., listened to the reading of more testimony and resumed deliberations at 8:45 p. m.

The chief testimony read to the jury after its return to the courtroom was that of William E. Foley, Miss Coplon's former boss in the Justice Department. This testimony the defense called earlier a lying attempt to frame the slight, brunette defendant.

The jurors were allowed to reexamine these papers found in Miss Coplon's handbag:

1. Extracts from a "decoy" memorandum which Foley said he gave Miss Coplon to see what she would do with it. The defense contends Foley told her to take it home with her. Foley denied giving her permission to take it out of the office.

2. Another memorandum in which Miss Coplon told of trying to see a top secret FBI report on Russian and Communist intelligence activities in this country.

3. Various data slips reporting on FBI investigations.

The case went to the jury one year and two days after Miss Coplon and the short, light-haired Russian were arrested by FBI agents in a chase down and across Manhattan.

Ryan told the jury in his charge that the Government failed to produce direct evidence that Miss Coplon and Gubitchev conspired to spy in their furtive New York meetings.

But he added: "A conspiracy may be proved by circumstantial evidence."

Opponents of Liberal DP Bill Delay Action by Senate Recess

Opponents of liberalized displaced persons legislation yesterday forced an unscheduled early recess of the Senate in what Administration leaders flatly described as a delaying action.

"It is definitely a filibuster," Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) told newsmen. "This action proves it."

Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.), who earlier blocked a Lucas effort to limit the DP debate, maneuvered the overnight recess. The Senate had been in session little more than three hours.

Lucas was absent from the floor at the time and Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.), a leading opponent of the liberalized substitute bill, was bitterly criticizing administration of the present DP law.

Few Senators on Floor

Langer asked Jenner to yield to him "to make a motion."

"I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock tomorrow," said Langer.

Only a handful of Senators was on the floor. Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.) was presiding. Hendrickson hestiated a moment and then put the motion to a vote. The Senate, which usually lets the majority leader arrange its timetable, recessed before Lucas could return to the floor.

Senate debate on the McCarran bill, making some Administration-sought changes in the present law but retaining other allegedly discriminatory features, has been in progress since February 27.

The opposition "talkathon" centered mainly against a substitute, generally following the lines of the more liberal House-passed measure. A majority of the members of McCarran's Judiciary Committee has indicated it will support the substitute, proposed by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.).

O'Conor Would Deport Frauds

One Senator, Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), told the Senate this country "will not discharge its obligations and its responsibilities unless we adopt the more liberal measure discussed in this debate."

O'Conor urged, however, "the most careful screening and selection of displaced persons" and called for deportation of those who come into the country "through fraudulent means." The Marylander submitted an amendment he said was designed to "guarantee, as far as possible, that displaced persons who come here under any particular category or under a guarantee as to employment . . . should fulfill their obligations."

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) also indorsed the substitute measure.

But Senator Inner bitterly attacked the DP program and proposals to liberalize it. Charging the Displaced Persons Commission has validated assurances for more people than can enter under the law, he shouted: "They do not follow the law. They do not care about the intent of Congress."

Senator Lucas, who had been attending a Senate-House conference on cotton acreage legislation, angrily strode into the chamber after the Senate had quit without so much as a record vote.

Smiling broadly, Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), in charge of the legislation, also walked in after the recess. Lucas said he had asked members of the Judiciary Committee to stay in the chamber, and asked why McCarran wasn't on the floor.

"Where was the majority leader?" McCarran snapped.

Earlier, Lucas and McCarran had dickered for a debate limitation to get a vote on the bill by Wednesday, but Langer said he would object to any agreement setting a time for a vote on the substitute.

Lucas indicated he will hold the Senate in session longer each day if necessary to get a vote on the measure this week. He is expected to renew his request for a debate limitation today.

Gas-Filled Barge Hits Navy Seaplane Tender

Norfolk, Va., March 6 (AP).—A Navy barge loaded with gasoline rammed the Navy seaplane tender Shenandoah today while the tender was moored at the convoy escort piers.

Naval spokesmen reported no one was injured and damage to the Shenandoah was "superficial," though her propellers "may have been damaged."

Red Sub Force Held 'Serious' War Factor

By The Associated Press

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman yesterday said Russia's submarine strength would be a "serious" factor in the event of war, but would not stop the United States Navy from striking on the offense.

"We haven't as much antisubmarine strength as we would like to have," Sherman said.

"In the event of an emergency, we would need additional antisubmarine craft immediately. Escort carriers, destroyers, patrol planes—all the elements of antisubmarine forces—would have to be expanded very quickly.

However, that situation would not cause us to delay using our offensive forces."

Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, presented his views in an interview copyrighted by United States News and World Report magazine.

The Navy's top admiral also cautioned:

1. That American naval strength in the Pacific and in the Mediterranean is not "completely adequate" to cope with possible emergencies.

2. That the ability to reactivate this country's extensive mothball fleet is "decreasing" because of the dissipation of trained personnel demobilized at the end of World War II.

Asked if the Navy has sufficient funds to keep the inactive fleet in a proper state of preservation, Sherman replied:

"I am not satisfied with the amount of money we are putting into it at the present time.

"In this year we have accepted shortage in certain areas in order to avoid further reduction in operating forces, as a calculated risk and as a procedure advisable for the short term only."

59 U. S. Ships 'Sunk' In Portrex Operations

San Juan, Puerto Rico, March 6 (AP).—"Enemy" forces being attacked by an American Army-Navy-Air Force invasion team were credited today with having sunk 59 ships and destroyed 69 aircraft since the United States' biggest postwar games began eight days ago.

Defense "losses" thus far total 24 to 27 submarines and 39 aircraft.

The submarine aspect of Portrex—Puerto Rican exercises—is considered especially important. Russia has been putting great emphasises on underseas craft. In the war games, the "enemy" has no surface craft.

The "enemy" has 10 submarines and 98 planes. Their pilots are from the U. S. Navy, Marines and the Puerto Rican National Guard. The "American" forces include 600 planes and 80,000 men.

Canasta Dare Gets Girl $10 Toward Horse

Ten-year-old Brenda Baugh, as pretty a blonde as you'd care to meet, wants a horse.

That's why, being somewhat of a whiz at that pleasant little card game called canasta, she decided to take on Oswald Jacoby. Jacoby, you may recall, is also somewhat of a whiz, having written a couple of books on canasta.

Miss Baugh's proposition, made by letter from her home at 3638 Valley dr., Alexandria, was short and direct. The first game would be for practice; the second for blood. In short, she bet Jacoby $10 she could beat him.

"If you win," she told the master, "you can do what you want with the money, but if I win, I am saving it for my horse. I am 10 years old."

Trouble was, Jacoby was out in Arizona. But, his secretary informed Brenda's aunt, Mrs. Arch Eddy, by long distance phone the other day, Jacoby was sending Brenda $10 to go toward the horse.

That being so. Brenda relaxed sufficiently between the postman's trips yesterday to confess she's just crazy about canasta.

Canasta, though, actually has a comparatively mild hold on her. But you take that horse.

Brenda made the acquaintance of horses at camp last summer. She thought they were pretty fine things. She's wanted one ever since.

Now, she confides, she's got $32 in shiny new dimes cached toward a horse. When Jacoby's $10 arrives, it'll make $42 in shiny new dimes.

Brenda lives with her aunt and uncle and is a fifth grader at Charles Barrett Elementary School.

Osteopath Wins Verdict In Seduction Suit

Madison, S. Dak., March 6 (AP).—A jury tonight returned a verdict for Dr. Lloyd Jackson, Ramona, S. Dak., osteopath sued for $60,000 for the alleged seduction of a woman patient.

Albert Koopman, 38, a farmer, alleged that Dr. Jackson had improper relations with his wife on two occasions. He asked $30,000 for each of the two counts.

Jurors, after hearing three days of testimony, delivered their verdict for the osteopath in two hours.

Chiang Scores 'Selfishness' Among Kuomintang Leaders

Taipei, Formosa, March 6 (U.P.)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek told members of the Kuomintang (National Party) today he had made a mistake in taking leave from the Presidency.

Chiang said when he "stepped down" from the Presidency he did not believe China's crisis would become as serious as it has. As a result, he said, the Kuomintang must be completely overhauled along with some government agencies.

Chiang, addressing the Kuomintang's Sun Yat-sen memorial meeting, attacked members of party cliques who place selfish personal interests above the public good. He demanded immediate reforms "to save the nation and the party."

"In the few days since I resumed the Presidency I have found most members of the Kuomintang selfish," he said. "They care only for personal interests and those of their cliques. This must end."

Chiang's formal announcement of the appointment of Gen. Chen Cheng as Premier is expected Tuesday. There was no official indication who would fill other important posts.

Alexandria Council Shifts Stand on Rents

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

In a whirlwind finish, the Alexandria City Council caught up with the rent decontrol bandwagon yesterday and clambered aboard. Until then, it had been running the other way.

The council, in special session, decided by five to one that "the time has come when governmental control should be removed and the stability of rentals . . . should be permitted to find their level upon the basis of the economic factors of supply and demand."

Some weeks ago, the council went on record opposing lifting of rent controls. A little later, the Virginia General Assembly voted to abolish controls everywhere in the State.

Saturday night, apparently, the last hope for controls in northern Virginia died in the Assembly when it voted down Arlington Delegate J. Maynard Magruder's "local option" rent control bill.

For one thing, the council explained yesterday, it had originally favored retention of controls because of information that the Area Rent Advisory Board believed they should be kept.

"Subsequent investigation has disclosed that this information was inaccurate," the city fathers said in their resolution.

Not so, rejoined Fred N. Windridge, chairman of the rent board. A majority of his group favored continuing rent controls when the bill was before the Legislature and so informed the legislators, he added.

Two Takoma Park Brothers Injured When Hit by Auto

Two Takoma Park brothers were injured yesterday when struck by an auto while crossing the street near their home.

George, 7, and Byron, 4, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boileau, 6613 Poplar ave., were admitted to the Washington Sanitarium after the rfont fender of a vehicle, driven by William James Matthews, 27, White Oak, Md., struck them at New Hampshire ave. near Ray rd.

Matthews told police he saw the children and swerved his car but could not avoid hitting them. He was charged with reckless driving and failing to maintain proper brakes.

George suffered a possible fractured right leg and brush burns; Byron, injury to his right foot and brush burns.

Herschels Near 50th Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. J. F. HERSCHEL
. . . "To cook, bake, and season"

There is no secret to happy marriage.

That's what Mrs. J. F. Herschel says—and she should know. For she is completing 50 years of happy marriage on Wednesday, and she says all you have to learn is "how to give and take and agree."

And for a wife, there is one other thing: "You must know how to cook, bake, and season." After 50 years at it, Mrs. Herschel is not yet ready to admit she has learned all there is to know about this latter qualification.

Mr. and Mrs. Herschel have been Washington area residents for the past 10 years. They live at 8905 Sudbury rd., Silver Spring, Md. Their son, C. L. Herschel, is a member of the advertising staff of The Washington Post.

Plane Strike Negotiations Continue Here

New attempts to mediate the wage dispute between American Airlines and its maintenance men were made yesterday as the employes' strike continued in its sixth day.

Francis A. O'Neill, chairman of the National Mediation Board, was conferring last night in his office here with several New York officials of the maintenance men's union, the CIO Transport Workers Union.

O'Neill talked with American Airlines officials yesterday and was told the company was maintaining its stand that it would not negotiate while the employes are on strike.

Meanwhile, picketing continued yesterday at the entrance to the National Airport terminal as local maintenance and supply employes stayed out, keeping the number of flights here down to 14 per day instead of the normal 70.

The airline normally serves 68 cities, and 37 were receiving service yesterday, according to the company.

Giant Negro Apt. Planned

1300 block of Rhode Island ave. ne. It will consist of efficiency apartments with one bedrooms, living room, kitchen, bath and dining space.

Owners of record of the property are Melvin A. Schlosberg, a partner in the firm of the F. & W. Construction Co. of Arlington, and Louis Zions, District real estate broker.

An historical house high on a hilltop presently occupies the site where the new building will go up. It was built sometime in the late Eighteenth Century and was operated for a number of years as a tourist home.

It was built of "rammed earth," a type of construction in which ordinary dirt, slightly moist, is packed into wooden forms and pounded until it is packed hard.

Because it will be necessary to raze the house and level off the big hill, it will be about a year before the project is completed.

Last Novmber Thomas C. Batringer, District Director, Federal Housing Administration Insuring Office, announced he would welcome more applications for financing for apartment projects for Negroes.

The financing provisions of Section 608 of the Housing Act expired February 28, by which time the FHA had processed a total of 26 projects involving 2500 units.

House Group To Weigh D. C. Rent Control

Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) said yesterday the question of another year of District rent control will be discussed by the House District Judiciary Subcommittee Wednesday.

Harris said the proposal to continue rent controls in the District through June 30 of next year is one of several matters slated for attention.

District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) said he feels the rent control question should be made the subject of public hearings.

Rent control here operates under a special statute applying to the District alone. McMillan said public hearings would be the best way to find out if the District needs continued rent control.

Harris cited the views both of Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell favoring another year of rent control here, and of groups that have sent in appeals for an end to rent control when the law expires June 30.

One new request for an end to rent control was issued yesterday by Harold H. Davis, of the District Chapter, Property Owners Association of America. He said he sent the request to Harris.

In another move Representative Harris said he would suggest that daylight saving time legislation be taken up at the next meeting of the District committee.

Chairman McMillan said he would be glad to have the committee discuss it at any time. Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) said he hopes to talk with McMillan today about the daylight saving time bill. Klein is author of the measure.

The committee yesterday approved two measures: (1) to increase from $50 to $300 the limit on unsecured District credit Union loans and (2) to key the District into the national program for handling disposal of surplus property under the law of June 30, 1949.

COs' Gesture

Although the United States has prided itself that it respected liberty of conscience even during wartime, the House has cheapened the value of the work done by conscientious objectors. The relatively small number of men conscripted for "work of national importance" as an alternative to military service received no Government compensation or family allowances, and when they were hired out to private employers most of their wages was paid into a "frozen" fund held by the Treasury. Now the House has turned down the Judd bill which embodies a request of the COs themselves that the money be given to CARE to provide scientific and professional publications for depleted libraries abroad.

The hunger for additional technical reading matter is most apparent in countries such as Germany, where the war interrupted normal contacts with the outside, and in the new independent states, such as India. The furnishing of such material under the auspices of CARE would have complemented existing programs and would have been one of the best ways of promoting friendship and understanding. Perhaps the poorest of all excuses for the House action is the one that seemingly received most attention—that the Treasury cannot afford the expenditure. The $1,300,000 involved is not Government money; it is money legally earned by the COs themselves, who have renounced all claim to it. There could be no better use for it. One may suspect that the real explanation for the defeat was a hidden effort further to punish the conscientious objectors and to kill their gesture.

Nationalism In Europe

Another victory for nationalism in Europe and a corresponding defeat for European unity have been chalked up by the French treaty with the Saar and the reaction in Germany. The French have obtained 50-year leases of the Saar coal mines and in return have given the Saarlanders political autonomy. Chancellor Adenauer protests that the treaty turns the Saar into a French "colony," that it disposes of the property of the old Reich to which the present federal government is heir, and violates statements made to him by the United States, British, and French governments. None of these charges can be substantiated. The French have merely carried out to the letter arrangements which have long been authorized by all the Allied governments except Russia. The million or so Saarlanders, typical border folk, have a Diet of their own, and the great majority of the members, after adopting the French franc as their currency, are overwhelmingly in favor of complete economic union with France. This is the link which has now been completed by the new treaty.

Without a doubt the exaggerations in the Adenauer statement are in part explicable by his domestic need to voice the shrill hostility of the German nationalists. Nevertheless he is probably not overstating the impact of the deal upon the Germans. Chancellor Adenauer says that Franco-German relations have suffered and that the Germans may no longer be interested in membership on the Council of Europe. This is strong language, but it reflects the bad situation that has arisen. The map of Europe is being rolled back at such a rapid clip that the headlines of the 50's are becoming more and more like the headlines of the 30's.

This is the penalty of the untidy diplomacy and the lack of over-all policy which have marked the approach to the problem of Germany. The problem of Germany is the problem of Europe. If there had prevailed in this country and in the European nations a view about Europe, then this retrogression might never have happened. How can statesmen professing a devotion to a European order think of Saar coal in isolation? It should be treated within the whole context of the heavy industry of continental western Europe; the French, alas, have gone back to the nationalist need of balancing French-Saar coal against western German coal. They may say, and indeed do say, that to wait for a peace treaty is to wait interminably, yet the French might have realized the consequences of their action in retarding the quest for a European order.

If only this country, at the conclusion of hostilities, had come out frankly for a federal pact uniting Europe instead of a peace treaty! That might have been the beginning of a new era. Instead, one fillip after another has been given to nationalism, generally to counter Soviet diplomacy, and the last demonstration was the setting up of the Bonn government. Chancellor Adenauer and Foreign Minister Schuman, as good Europeans as Europe has thrown up in several generations, seem to have become prisoners of the nationalisms of their respective countries.

Evidence Of Contempt

Though the coal strike is over, the basic question that it raised is far from being settled. That question is whether the Government can compel a union which is endangering the national health and safety to end its strike. We had supposed that this issue was settled by the rulings of the higher courts in similar cases. But Judge Keech found the miners not to be in contempt. The Department of Justice, he said, had not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the union was responsible for continuation of the strike. This caused us to believe that the department had been negligent in not submitting the kind of evidence that would have been convincing, for the fact of contempt seemed to be indisputable.

We had felt, specifically, that the case could have been buttressed by evidence of goon squads at work to keep men out of the mines and various other acts in defiance of the court's order. It has been brought to our attention, however, that evidence of this type might have confirmed the UMW's contention that continuation of the strike was due wholly to the action of individual miners, and there was no evidence of secret communication between the UMW and the locals counteracting Mr. Lewis' return-to-work order. In these circumstances the Government felt—and on reconsideration we now feel—that the most convincing evidence of contempt was to be found in the fact that 370,000 miners continued their strike and the UMW continued to take advantage of that strike in bargaining with the operators. Certainly if the courts are going to disregard such evidence and rely upon verbal instructions by union headquarters, which obviously do not convey the real wishes of the union officials, protection of the national health and safety by means of injunction may well prove impossible.

For this reason it is of the utmost importance that this legal issue be settled. The Department of Justice has appealed Judge Keech's ruling to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. We hope that the court will find it feasible to rule on the law involved in spite of the wind-up of the strike; for if the present state of confusion were left unresolved, Congress and the courts would be at a great disadvantage in dealing with any similar national emergencies that might arise.

There is some reason for believing that Judge Keech misunderstood the ruling of the Court of Appeals in the case that grew out of the 1948 strike. In that instance Mr. Lewis had failed to order the miners back to work on April 5 when the temporary restraining order was served on the union. He gave no instructions to the miners until April 12, when the dispute concerning the welfare fund was settled. The Court of Appeals did say, in upholding the conviction for contempt, that "if Lewis had sent on April 5 telegrams of a directory or advisory nature, similar to those he sent on April 12, neither he nor the union would have been guilty of contempt of the court's order." But this has to be read in the light of the fact that Mr. Lewis' order of April 12 had the effect of sending the miners back to their jobs. In the present instance Mr. Lewis went through the motions of ordering the men back and the miners, knowing he was under compulsion, respected his wishes instead of his word. Certainly this relieved Mr. Lewis from any charge of contempt; but should it free the union from contempt when the totality of its membership was openly defying the court's order?

In the previous case the Court of Appeals noted: "The evidence is overwhelming that the walk-out was concerted." The evidence of concerted action was even more overwhelming last week. Should the courts decide to ignore such evidence and rely upon some overt act of contempt upon the part of union officials, they would be issuing a general invitation to lawlessness and irresponsibility on the part of big national unions. It is difficult to believe that the last word from the courts will be so out of keeping with the realities of present-day union practices.

Cut Wood Or Starve

The Rockland (N. Y.) Town Board has devised a plan for cutting relief costs that is a throwback to the days when recipients of public charity were treated as malingerers and held personally responsible for failure to support themselves and their families. In the future, the Rockland Town Board decrees, no family in that community will be given home relief, if a male member of the family physically able to work refuses to cut down trees, split wood, and clear away debris from a nearby woodland tract. The men will be paid for their labor, but wages will be subtracted from relief allotments.

No doubt most able-bodied men on relief would welcome the opportunity to engage in work suited to their age, physical capacity, and training. But how many men have the physical strength required to do the work of a woodsman? Inexperienced men wielding axes and saws will easily become exhausted and may suffer injuries that will add hospital costs to the relief bill of the town.

Under State systems of unemployment compensation workers are denied benefits if they refuse to accept suitable employment. But they are not disqualified for benefits if they refuse to take unsuitable jobs. Every principle of fair and humane dealing is violated by a relief policy that disregards reasonable tests of suitability. Instead of restoring the self-respect of those forced to depend on charity, the Rockland test of willingness to work is calculated to demoralize them and impair their chances of obtaining regular employment of a kind suited to their capacity and training.

Secrecy And Security

The problem facing the Administration in the wake of the 14-year sentence meted out Dr. Klaus Fuchs is how to prevent repetition without fettering scientific effort. The secrecy boys think the problem is easy to solve. They demand more secrecy, though there could be no more dangerous illusion, especially respecting atomic energy, than that a wall of secrecy somehow insures security.

Our best military security, short of genuine international control of atomic energy or atomic disarmament, lies in the most advanced atomic program possible. The key here is production. Within a limited area secrecy, to be sure, can be a means to that end. Even though the Russians possess the same basic knowledge that we do, presumably they do not have data on all our technological processes. It would save them time if they had our knowledge. Accordingly the purpose of secrecy is to prevent them from getting it.

Such secrecy can be effective, however, only if perspective is maintained. It should be confined to that small area of facts that are really significant. Constant reassessment is also necessary. The obvious step now is to find out just what Fuchs told the Russians and then to declassify it; there is no point in maintaining a false secrecy on what the Russians already know. Indeed, the case ought to be the signal for a more intensive general effort to declassify nonessential atomic information. Far too much data is still kept from Congress; for example, should not legislators know the number of atomic bombs? Only with a policy of the fullest possible information can intelligent public policy be made.

It is of course necessary to insist that persons working in the atomic energy program be loyal. If the present discussions on exchanging atomic information with Britain and Canada are to bear fruit—as we believe they must—it is imperative that common standards as to screening and loyalty checks prevail. It would be a grave blow to the whole atomic program, however, if the Fuchs leak were to blind Americans as to present needs for putting the best brains of the three nations to work. It would be an equally grave blow if suspicion were to hamper American scientists now working on atomic energy.

British Program

The statement of policy by the new Attlee government contained in the King's speech is brief and to the point. There is none of the narrow-mindedness of the electioneering in it. On the home front there is to be only "a limited program of legislation." The reason given is not, of course, the delicate parliamentary situation, but "restricted time" and "the heavy volume of financial business to be transacted." This is a reference to the coming debate on the budget which, in the absence of any working agreement, is bound to be long and contentious. How the budget can be pared drastically, as the situation warrants, and full employment (to which the government again dedicates itself) maintained will be the conundrum of the present session.

In foreign affairs the government deals comprehensively but sketchily with its achievements and hopes. There is a good word for all the agencies of international collaboration, as well as many of the projects of the collaborators, even the proposed European payments scheme. Nothing is said about the sterling balances—one of the main stumbling blocks to British agreement on the payments scheme. The slowing down of progress in this and other negotiations has hitherto been explained as necessary because of the election campaign. Now that the campaign is over, perhaps there will be a speed-up, for upon this and related questions in foreign affairs Mr. Attlee can legitimately expect cooperation by the opposition under Mr. Churchill.

Charter And The Court

In spite of the fact that the cold war has reduced to a trickle the cases going to the International Court of Justice, that tribunal has given a good account of itself in an advisory opinion on use of the veto to exclude new members of the United Nations. The General Assembly asked the court to rule on whether the Assembly could admit new members who have been vetoed by one of the Security Council's permanent members or failed to obtain the necessary majority in the Council. The Soviet Union contended that the court had no jurisdiction in the case because it involved a political matter. The court rejected this thesis, and even the Soviet judge joined in the finding that such interpretation of the United Nations Charter is "essentially a judicial task." The decision thus more securely establishes the World Court as the proper organ for interpretation of the Charter.

The court then proceeded to hand down a thoroughly judicial decision. The Assembly may not admit new members, it said, without action by the Security Council. To hold otherwise, as Argentina had requested the court to do, would have been, said a majority of 12 judges, to deprive the Council of an important function entrusted to it by the Charter. This is the position that both the United States and Russia had taken—the position required by a candid reading of the Charter. The desirability of admitting to the U. N. the nine countries that the Soviet Union has vetoed does not alter the necessity of upholding the Charter as it stands. The court has enhanced its prestige. It is a pity that its machinery for judicial settlement of international disputes is so little used.

Kennan's Prescription

When a man of Mr. Kennan's experience and influence in international affairs speaks on the burning question of the hour it behooves us to listen. But it is most disconcerting to listen and hear no clear answers. Briefly, he seems to be saying that if we "maintain a military posture" for ourselves and our European allies, "an early military onslaught on the Western world by Russia is hardly likely." In other words, if we engage in the armaments race successfully we can buy a few years of peace. However, we are now informed from all sides that Russia by an all-out effort is rapidly winning the armaments race. The solution to this predicament is obvious. We must catch up with Russia at all cost.

What then shall we do with the few years of dearly bought peace? For one thing, Mr. Kennan says, "we can act in a spirit of justice and good will toward others, which will make it possible for us to help a little toward bringing a general attitude of peaceful cooperation into the world at large." But Mr. Kennan had just finished saying that Russian expansion can be checked only by a formidable show of force and that any overall "agreement" with the Soviet leaders "would be worth precisely what the realities of world power made it worth at any particular moment." Now how can we inject an attitude of peaceful cooperation into the realities of world power?

There is a way. That way is to give the United Nations law making powers in matters of international aggression, and commit sufficient military force to the U. N. to make enforcement of those laws a certainty.

Is this too distant a goal to work toward in the few (perhaps 15) remaining years of dearly bought peace? To 112 Congressmen who support H. Con. Res. 64, and 22 Senators who support S. Con. Res. 56, it is not. It is, rather, the only way to create a "situation of fact" which Russia must face and accept, without creating at the same time the nationalistic fears, jealousies and antagonisms which lead to war.

39-Hour Week

During most of my 30 years of Federal service our working hours were seven daily through Friday and four on Saturday, making a 39-hour week. That is how the Government should run. Here is a golden mean dictated by rich experience.

The 39-hour week leaves at all times a reserve of worker energy from which freely to draw overtime work as needed. Far more important, Government services are kept open to the public nearly 20 percent longer, while reducing delays in Government correspondence or other action by perhaps more than 20 percent.

In the early 40s, during the war, Federal office hours were raised to 48 a week, eight hours every weekday. The urge behind that move was noble of heart but empty of head. Routine workers at desks simply cannot work at top pitch eight hours a day and six days a week. Executives in the Government are different. Their whole day is alive with change and stimulation. Overtime comes easy to them, and they sail into it eagerly. Its reward is theirs.

The 48-hour week in offices made of time-killing an art and a conspiracy. A supervisor could not fairly object to either a morning or an afternoon coffee, to any particular visit back or forth, to "cleaning up on company time," nor to an occasional stretch of straight clock-watching. Overstaffing was likewise hard to spot, where soldiering on the job was so universal.

After VJ-Day the Government closed down entirely on Saturdays but clung to its preposterous eight-hour weekday. Time-killing remains on most days a necessary office habit. Staffs are still too jaded on most days to be worked overtime, save in grimmest need. And the great American public, which our Government ostensibly serves, gets out of its servant no action from Friday afternoon until Monday morning, if then.

"Dual Schools"

In your February 20 edition you discuss the possibility of doing away with the dual school system in Washington and setting up an integrated system in its place. If a mixed system is started in the Nation's Capital, it should be really integrated. That is, pupils, teachers and school officials of all racial groups should participate in school activities on a basis of complete equality.

Many of the mixed school systems in our northern cities fall far short of this ideal condition. In some of them, Negro teachers do not have an equal opportunity to secure employment in the schools. In others, colored employes teach only where the overwhelming majority of pupils is colored, while teaching in really mixed schools is reserved for instructors of other racial origin. It is, moreover, true that in such systems, Negro teachers have slight chance for promotion among white personnel.

Superseding the present system in Washington with one like this would not be a change for the better. We should make sure that any drastic change in our school system would be accompanied by legislative safeguards, to make integration real and sure.

British Oil Buying

On March 15, 1914, President Wilson went before the Congress and asked for the repeal of that clause in the Panama Canal Tolls Act which exempted American vessels engaged in the coastwide trade from the payment of tolls. He asserted that the exemption clearly violated the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty, and added that he made his request in support of the Administration's foreign policy and that he wouldn't "know how to deal with matters of even greater delicacy and nearer consequence if you do not grant it to me in ungrudging measure."

Would you be good enough to explain, if you can, how the Secretary of State and Mr. Hoffman can carry on the ECA program which insists that western European nations spend no dollars they don't absolutely have to, if the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee lashes out in violent criticism of a western European nation which has no presumption to carry out the very suggestion of Messrs. Acheson and Hoffman, and to conserve its precious dollars by buying oil outside of Texas?

Labor Court

I would have a labor court in each county, one in each State and one at Washington, D. C. Each court would consist of three judges—one member to be elected by employers, one by employes and one by those who are neither employers nor employes.

Ample time before expiration of existing contracts would be allowed for collective bargaining, conciliation, etc. At the end of contract or a pre-determined date before expiration, say 30 days, the case would go automatically to the labor court. The decision of the county court would be binding until reversed by one of the two higher courts.

I would not try to compel anyone to work who did not want to. But I do not think anyone has the right to say "if I will not work, you shall not." Hence picketing would be strictly prohibited.

If labor and capital knew this law existed they would reach a decision between themselves rather than allow it to go to the court in 99 percent of the cases.

Flagstad's Return

Recently I read with interest Mr. Paul Hume's resume of the facts relating to Madame Flagstad's life and present status in Norway. These facts should put to rest all prejudice based on our nationalistic impulses. Probably we should have realized that under extreme pressure great sacrifices are often made for love of husband, home and native land which, sensationally reported, are easily misinterpreted by those who are too quick to see evil motives where none exist.

Certainly I am not afraid that Madame Flagstad may harm us in any way. Further ostracism of artists seems narrow-minded fanaticism. It was with appreciation that I learned that Mr. Rudolph Bing of the Metropolitan Opera has so intelligently and wisely engaged Madame Flagstad for future performances.

Flag Burning

Your issue of February 28 features a picture and account of one of our sergeants "following" military regulations, as he "throws" the Stars and Stripes to be burned "along with—papers."

The occasion (evacuating our Sofia Legation) clearly demanded the strictly regulation burning. But the method (suitable for a bundle of rags) is a shocking violation of the injunction against methods involving any "suggestion of disrespect."

Under battle conditions, there might be need for burning in the quickest way possible at the moment. Obviously, there was no such emergency in this instance; obviously, a photographer was calmly taking the picture. Under the spirit of Army regulations, and of countless manuals, the burning should have been a final and separate and respectfully performed act.

Answer to Communism

Thank God for Dean Acheson and the many human beings who try to practice the simple principles that Christ taught.

It is my humble belief that only in daily attempting to practice these simple tenets can we hope to reeducate the people who have been "taken in" by the destructive religion of communism. It is a definite challenge to every red-blooded American, native born or citizen.

Caribbean Solution

A Communication

IT IS our belief that the time has come for the Organization of American States to make a constructive effort to encourage a just, fair, equitable, and democratic solution of the so-called Caribbean imbroglio. This has been brought about by the aggressiveness of the dictatorial regime of Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo, which, for the past 20 years has systematically and ruthlessly liquidated all opposition, and has established a police state which is a threat to the peace of the Caribbean.

The investigating committee of the Council of the Organization of American States has returned from its official "fact-finding" mission to Haiti, the Dominican Republican, Cuba, and Guatemala, and this week will present its report to the Council of the Organization of American States, which is acting as provisional organ of consultation for the American Republics, under the terms of the Rio Treaty.

The committee's report, when presented, will serve as a basis for the decisions to be taken by the council in its efforts to find a peaceful solution to the troubled situation in the Caribbean, which involves two main points:

(1) Dictator Trujillo's powers to declare war upon any country that in his opinion tolerates or protects forces whose purpose is to invade the Dominican Republic—which powers he has hypocritically relinquished hoping to soften the findings of the committee, and to put a weapon in the hands of the appeasers of his regime, in order to twist the real facts in this situation.

(2) A Haitian charge that Trujillo's regime conspired in a plot to overthrow the constitutional and peaceful government of President Estimo.

IT IS my belief that both the United States Department of State and the honorable members of the fact-finding committee are well aware that the major blame for the Caribbean situation can be placed on the Trujillo regime, and until there is an end to his dictatorship there will be no peace in the Caribbean. It might be argued, however, that any action to bring a democratic representative government to the Dominican Republic or to any other of the totalitarian regimes of the Americas, as contemplated in the Charter of Bogota and other international documents, would be barred because it would destroy the principle of nonintervention.

The matter is presented as a sad dilemma: we either allow Trujillo to continue murdering his people and threatening the peace of the Americas, or we abrogate the traditional obligation of noninterference in the internal affairs of the American nations. This is not exactly so.

Although the principle of representative democracy with its accepted standards of human rights and civil liberties is considered by democratic and progressive forces of the Americas as more important than the principle of nonintervention which in the prewar years brought so many disasters to democratic powers in Europe during the decade of Hitler's aggressions and of the Spanish Civil War, we—the people that fought to bring democracy to Santo Domingo—believe that a formula could be found that would assist the honorable members of the committee to bring about a sound solution that would guarantee both the principle of nonintervention and of representative democracy.

WE ASK only that the committee invite Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo to call for a free election and permit three or more international observers to be present in order to guarantee both a free political campaign and a fair election. These officials sent by the inter-American organization charged with the safeguard of peace, security, and democracy of the Western Hemisphere would have no other function than as observers. In order to eliminate all suspicion and sensitiveness, it should be expressed in the resolution appointing them that they would have no other interest than to observe.

We believe that neither Trujillo nor the most conservative reactionary men of this country could have any objections to such a formula. If Trujillo should refuse, no one, even the most cautious and conservative, could approve the gesture of the despot; nor could he conserve any portion of the right to call himself a democrat. Therefore, there should be no objections to this proposition.

Five cents worth of democracy is all that we ask! No humiliation, no intervention, no threat, only moral force on behalf of democracy and for the protection of ourselves.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Electing A President

II

[This is the second of three articles on the Lodge-Gossett amendment to the Constitution (S. J. Res. 2) which passed the Senate on February 1, 1950, and is now before the House. If it is adopted by a two-thirds vote of the House, it must be ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States within seven years of the date when it is submitted to them by Congress.

[This series of articles has been written in consultation with and on the basis of a memorandum prepared for me by Mr. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., of Princeton, N. J.]

WE SHALL now discuss the disadvantages of the present general ticket system—that is to say th system by which all the electoral votes of the State are cast as a unit for the candidate who obtains a plurality of the popular vote.

Lippmann

THIS SYSTEM allows a much greater weight to the pluralities in large States than they are entitled to on the basis of numbers. Suppose, to make the mathematics simple, that the Union consisted of only two States, New York with 47 electoral votes and Mississippi with 9. Suppose further that if the votes were cast by districts—in the same manner that Representatives are chosen—the Democrat got 23 in New York and 8 in Mississippi, the Republican 24 in New York and 1 in Mississippi. In such a case it would be quite clear that the majority of the people in the two States combined had elected the Democrat by a vote of 31 to 25. Yet under the general ticket system the Republican would be declared President by a vote of 47 to 9. This cannot be fair.

Furthermore, the system permits the most important event in our political process—the election of a President—to be determined by small and local causes. It puts a premium on accident. It puts a premium on fraud. It exaggerates the power of splinter parties. It exaggerates the power of special interests. It makes it possible for a State minority, rather than a State majority, to capture the whole vote of the State, and so perhaps to swing the whole election.

THE SYSTEM put a premium on accident because any casual event—a rainy day in the rural districts, for example—may keep the voters of the State majority at home and swing the whole vote of the State to the voters of the minority. It is well known that bad weather affects urban voters less than rural voters and the two are commonly in different political parties.

The system puts a premium on fraud because by purchasing or fabricating a comparatively few votes in order to turn a popular minority into an apparent plurality, the whole electoral vote of the State can be had. In close elections in big States the temptation is very great.

Thus to use an example which will not offend anyone at the moment, we know that in 1868 Boss Tweed manufactured a Democratic majority for the whole State of New York by fraud in the City of New York. This gave Seymour instead of Grant the 33 electoral votes of New York State. A local fraud determined the postion of the whole State. In 1868 this fraud did not decide the choice of the President. In a close election it could have done that.

THE PRESENT system exaggerates beyond all reason the power of splinter parties. Thus in the 1948 election the supporters of Henry Wallace held the balance of power in New York State between Truman and Dewey, and they were able to throw 47 electoral votes to Dewey. Wallace polled 509,000 votes. Dewey's plurality over Truman was 61,000 votes.

The system also exaggerates most undesirably the power of special interests in that a small shift of votes makes such a big difference in the electoral vote. In the election of 1888 Harrison carried the large States by small pluralities and lost the small States by large pluralities. Due to the mechanism of the system a deficit of 96,000 popular votes was turned into a winning surplus of 65 electoral votes.

THE PRESENT system, moreover, exercises a strong tendency to limit effective participation in democratic elections to the doubtful States—to make a considerable number of States—that is to say the sure States—so politically inactive that in fact the two-party system does not really operate. In the selection of presidential candidates, in the appeal to public opinion, political managers fix their attention on the large and doubtful States, ignoring those which are small or sure.

In the solid South few Republicans bother to vote. For they know that their votes will be lost. Nor do many Democrats go to the polls. For they know that their votes are not needed. In these States a very considerable number of electoral votes are controlled by a very few persons. Such an abdication of individual political power and responsibility by the voters cannot be a good thing in a democratic society. But it is the consequence of politics played under the rules of the game set by the general ticket system.

AT FIRST blush it might seem that the obvious remedy would be to abolish the whole electoral voting system and to leave the choice to a plurality of the people voting at large. But such a reform could not pass the Senate.

It could not pass the Senate because the present electoral voting system, by giving to each State a bonus of two votes regardless of size, works to the advantage of the small States. They will never renounce this advantage, which they regard as a genuine and desirable element of the Constitution in its intention to protect them from the absolute power of the large States.

It ought not to pass because it is a sounder rule that the relative weight of communities in the electoral process should be proportional to their total population—voters and non-voters alike—rather than to the number of their actual voters.

Furthermore, if the President were elected by the people at large all the evils which we have mentioned in connection with the general ticket system—accident, fraud, and so forth—would appear in aggravated form, because they would not stop at the State lines. In addition, States would be under an inducement to compete with each other in lowering their voting qualifications. In Georgia, for example, children of 18 can vote; other States would soon follow or better the example. And in the end the Federal Government would have to step in and fix uniform voting qualifications, itself an undesirable result.

YET THE disadvantages and evils of the general ticket system ought to be dealt with. The question is how.

To the Founding Fathers and to many of the statesmen who came after them—to Hamilton, Jefferson, Madison, Gallatin, James A. Bayard, John Quincy Adams, Van Buren, Benton, Webster, Story and many others—the district system was clearly the most satisfactory remedy. This is the system supported by Representative Frederic R. Coudert, jr., of New York which he is offering as a substitute to the Lodge-Gossett amendment.

This district system, in the form which Mr. Coudert seems to have in mind, would divide each State into as many similar districts as there are Representatives in the House. In addition there would be two State-wide districts. The choice of a plurality of the people of each district would count as one electoral vote for the President. The choice of the people of the State as a whole would determine the other two electoral votes of the State. Thus, all but two of the electors of each State would be chosen by pluralities in a district and would be unaffected by the pluralities elsewhere in the State.

The district system, as we learn from Madison, was mostly, if not exclusively in view when the Constitution was framed and adopted. It was supplanted by the general ticket system now in use "as the only expedient for baffling the policy of the particular States which had set the example," that is to say, had adopted the general ticket system. It was a case of a bad system driving out a better one. For the district system in one State cannot exist in competition with the general ticket in another State. The State which operates under a general ticket system will then exercise more weight in the electoral vote than it deserves. Therefore, the only way that the district system can be restored is by constitutional admendent which would prevent any State from adopting the general ticket system.

IN OUR view the district system is a better remedy than the Lodge amendment and it should be restored. Our reason for preferring this system, which is contemplated in the Coudert substitute for the Lodge-Gossett amendment, rests on our objection to the principle of proportional representation. We shall discuss that in the third and concluding article of this series.

humane and progressive program of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Campaign Description

One paragraph in Hutchinson's 1946 campaign literature, when he ran against Byrd, described him as:

"A taxpayer who believes in economy in government and a balanced budget, but recognizes that governmental agencies essential to the security and safety of the Nation must be maintained."

Byrd's criticism of the Truman Administration has been aimed particularly at its spending and financial policies. He has been increasingly critical of Mr. Truman lately, contending that the President is leading the Nation down the road to socialism.

Mr. Truman told White House callers last summer that there were "too many Byrds" in Congress.

Byrd had a direct role in bottling up in committee the President's selection of former Gov. Mon C. Wallgren of Washington to be chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Byrd attacked Wallgren's competence for the job.

When the Senate approved Wallgren to the Federal Power Commission. He was given the seat formerly held by Leland S. Olds, whose reappointment the Senate had rejected.

When the Senate approval Wallgren for this post, Byrd was the lone Democratic Senator to vote no. The rollcall was 47 to 12.

The Virginian again led a fight against Mr. Truman's choice of Carl A. Ilgenfritz of Pittsburgh to head the Defense Department's Munitions Board. Ilgenfritz declined to relinquish his $70,000 private salary, but offered to work for the Government for nothing. Byrd said it would set a bad precedent to let him draw his private salary while serving the Government.

The Senate turned down the nomination, 40 to 28, last September 16.

Calling List

10 a. m.—Vice President Barkley, Speaker Rayburn, Senator Lucas and Representative McCormack.

12 noon—President receives officials and members of Four-H Clubs.

12:15 p. m.—Gov. X. Luis Mundoz Marina of Puerto Rico.

Corning Expected to Propose Major Changes For Schools

of white and Negro elementary education with city-wide functions.

There would be a white and a Negro director of curriculum, two directors in charge of supervision of teachers, another two to head up administration of buildings and a fourth pair in charge of special services for children.

This plan would absorb all jobs since there now is a vacancy in the first division of the white schools.

School officials regard the plan as a step in unifying administration of elementary schools and in setting up city-wide teaching standards.

The survey by George D. Strayer, retired Columbia University professor, blamed regional administration for the "spotty" quality of elementary instruction it found in the city.

Each divisional director now is in charge of all elementary school functions but only within the division assigned.

The plan will give more authority to elementary school principals who will be placed in direct charge of their buildings. The Strayer survey calls this a much-needed reform.

Dr. Corning also is expected to recommend a new job position of associate superintendent in charge of personnel.

The new school officer would be placed in charge of all personnel matters for both white and Negro schools.

Approval of the proposal by the Board of Education would be the first step in realigning the top administration of schools to do away with much of the duplication now resulting from the dual administration of white and Negro schools.

Dr. Strayer recommended the appointment of an over-all director of personnel as the first step in standardizing procedures now followed in white and Negro divisions.

Engel to Quit House For Governor Race

By The Associated Press

Representative Engel (R., Mich.), now serving his eighth term in the House, will seek the Republican nomination for Governor of Michigan, it was learned last night.

Already in the race are former Governor Harry F. Kelly of Detroit, expected to be one of the most formidable candidates; former Lieut. Gov. Eugene C. Keyes of Dearborn, and Mayor Thomas Leith of Brighton.

The winner probably will take on youthful Gov. G. Mennen Williams.

Barden Hits Spellman's View

New York, March 6 (AP).—Representative Graham Barden (D., N. C.) blamed the Catholic Church today for the defeats to date of Federal aid to education. He said the church had injected the religious issue into the controversy.

Barden, author of a bill which would restrict Federal aid to tax supported schools, criticized Francis Cardinal Spellman at a conference here of the Committee on Federal Aid to Public Education. The committee is a Nation-wide citizens' group not connected with any particular organization or church.

Barden, who said he had never mentioned Cardinal Spellman's name on a public platform before, declared:

"His eminence, the cardinal, made the very erroneous decision that the way to get me, and those of like convictions, out of his way, was to apply ugly names, besmirch and besmear to the point that we would seek cover.

"The same Cardinal Spellman attacked a great, noble American lady and mother—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt—one who has devoted her life to the happiness and freedom of all people—regardless of race, creed or color, and accused her of discrimination unworthy of an American mother. He spoke as a cruel authoritarian."

Archbishop Spellman is in Italy on a Holy Year pilgrimage. His office in New York said it had no comment.

Mrs. Roosevelt, also at the conference, said she was not in favor of a bill introduced by Senator Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) which would let some Federal money go for fringe services and let States decide whether private and parochial schools should get any funds.

Barden also attacked the Thomas bill, saying it had "a loophole through which funds could be used for private or church schools."

Leo Pfeffer, an official of the American Jewish Congress, said the Catholic Church, in seeking aid for parochial schools, aims at the eventual "clerical" supervision of all education.

New York Cotton

New York, March 6 (AP).—Cotton futures turned irregular today, with the market experiencing heavy liquidation and hedging pressure at times. Losses extended to $1.20 a bale before aggressive trade demand for mill and export account led to a sharp rally in later dealings. Final prices were 50 cents a bale higher to 35 cents lower.

'Nationalized' Grain Trade Feared From Price Supports

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Midwestern grain dealers warned Congress yesterday that the nation's grain business is in danger of "nationalization and socialization" through the operation of the price support laws.

A group of traders headed by Walter R. Scott, executive vice president of the Kansas City Board of Trade, told the House Banking Committee that the Government is by-passing established dealers in taking over grain.

Meantime a House-Senate Conference Committee was trying to untangle differences between the two Houses over a bill affecting surpluses in cotton, wheat, peanuts and potatoes.

According to conferees, the members discussed:

1. A wide gap between what House and Senate members want in cotton acreage allotments next year. Congress passed a cotton and peanut bill last fall, restricting plantings of cotton about 20 percent below 1949. Many protests resulted in a new measure restoring many of the cuts. The House was more liberal than the Senate bill. House members yesterday held out for their measure. "Nothing was accomplished" one member said.

2. An amendment by Sentor Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) to permit the Government to pay the freight on potatoes given free to tax-supported institutions, such as hospitals, orphanages, etc.

Thomas said his measure was designed to halt the destruction of millions of bushels of surplus spuds about to be bought by the Commodity Credit Corporation. Agriculture experts said the change would dispose of few stocks unless it included all welfare agencies and some industrial uses.

Eastern railroads have agreed to lower freight charges, it was stated, cutting them almost in half on some routes.

A report that the committee was thinking of removing mandatory price supports from potatoes next year stirred representatives of potato growers in Washington. They are now supported at from 60 to 90 percent of parity. (Parity is a "fair price" for commodities, based on their historic relationship to the prices of industrial goods, taxes, etc.)

An amendment by Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) would change the range of price supports to zero to 90 percent, potato men heard.

The grain men blamed the grain surplus, that threatens to outrun storage capacity this fall, on "(1) an extraordinary succession of bountiful crops, and (2) the support-price program."

air into the veins?" asked Phinney.

"That's right," replied Sander.

Grilled on his testimony that "something snapped" in his mind, Dr. Sander replied:

"What I was thinking at that time is hard to explain . . . I realized I had not taken a life."

Sander said he told the county investigators — Medical Referee Robert E. Biron and Solicitor William H. Craig—that he had "not taken a life."

The accused doctor said they asked him directly whether he killed her. Sander said some of his statements—especially quoting him as saying he knew he had broken a law—had been "twisted."

Lambrene Papanagiotou testified Miss Rose told her that Dr. Sander had "nothing to worry about—that Mrs. Borroto was dead before he (Dr. Sander) entered the room."

Louise van Oudenhobe, a nurse at Elliot Hospital in Manchester, said Miss Rose told her first she was "afraid to testify" and later that the case would not have gone to trial if she and an unnamed doctor had been called before the grand jury that returned the indictment.

Progress Seen On Yugoslavs' Bank Loan Bid

World Bank President Eugene R. Black yesterday said "progress" is being made on Yugoslavia's application for a million-dollar loan.

He declined, however, to say when a decision may be reached.

Yugoslav Marshal Tito complained bitterly in a recent public speech about delays in Western financial aid.

Meantime, Black announced, a group of Swiss banks has purchased $6,625,000 in bonds of the World Bank for 428,500,000 Swiss francs.

The bank will lend the francs to Brazil, Holland and Mexico for the purchase of Swiss machinery.

FORE AND AFT – a Beauty and a Buy

It's lithe, long and lovely—and it calls not just for one look, but for two.

See how this sleek Sedan looks coming down the road—bold grillwork shining, broad bonnet purring with power, and the wide, curving, unbroken sweep of a one-piece windshield giving you horizon-wide outlook.

And spot the pretty picture you make going away.

The broad, wrap-around rear window and top-side styling in the Buick Riviera manner.

The graceful, spacious trunk, the "double bubble" taillights, the sense of high-fashion fleetness in everything from rear fender lines to the curve of the roof.

Yes, that's beauty—beauty in the unmistakable Buick manner. But observe also:

Interiors are extra roomy in all dimensions. The biggest you can buy for the money, we believe — and bigger than many higher-priced cars.

And, since this is a Buick SUPER, there's sensational new power under the hood—Buick's own F-263 Fireball straight-eight, this year's big news in valve-in-head power.

Yes, when you go stepping in this one, you'll really step—with roominess and top-drawer styling and the level going of all-coil springing—yes, and Dynaflow Drive* too, if you choose—making your pleasure complete.

The price? Well, drop in on your Buick dealer, ask about the SUPER 126 and be prepared for happy listening. Here's a buy—so grand a buy you'll lose no time getting behind a Buick wheel.

Nation's Screens To Take on Color

By Richard L. Coe

YOU'LL PROBABLY be seeing a lot more Technicolored pictures as a result of the Government's win in an antitrust suit against Technicolor, Inc., and the Technicolor Motion Picture Co. of Los Angeles.

This suit has been in the works for 2½ years and it means that the best of the color process companies may no longer enjoy the tight hold it's had over its patents.

In the past, use of the film has been conditioned on use of Technicolor cameras, services and facilities. Now, the courts say, the company must license its 150-odd patents and future patents, partly free and partly on a "reasonable royalty" basis.

The company, headed by Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, must also furnish all "know-how" to licensees who pay such royalties.

Still safely protected is that unbeatable word: "Technicolor." That word has virtually become a common noun or adjective in the language and, strictly speaking, it's always capitalized. The court has protected this word for the Kalmus company and it's a valuable one. Only that recent Ansco process (seen here in "The Man on the Eiffel Tower") approaches the excellence of the Technicolor technique, a three-strip camera infinitely superior to lesser patents of varying descriptive names.

You'll not notice much difference from this suit, though the familiar screen credit lines, "Color by Natalie Kalmus," is going into the discard, a development quite apart from the case.

This, to avid movie fans, seems shattering, for what is a Technicolor film without Natalie's credit line? Mrs. Kalmus once observed my respect for Technicolor and told me some interesting facts about it.

"Very few people," she pointed out, "appreciate the fact that Technicolor has more commitments than it can possibly handle and that it is, of course, more advantageous for us to use our equipment and plant capacity for only the better, more promising features."

Commenting on newsreel coverage of the Rose Bowl game and parade a couple of years ago, I asked, "Where was Natalie and her Technicolor?"

Mrs. Kalmus answered that she "was on the high seas returning from England after having filmed five features and the royal wedding. From my point of view, the latter was a very bad job due to inadequate lighting."

So you see, after all, Natalie is something of an expert on Technicolor filming techniques and I for one will be missing her credit line and good sense. Natalie's a great golfing fan and I expect she's indulging herself these days.

Yes, the suit's outcome means you'll probably see more Technicolor pictures within a few years and, with the name still in clear possession, you needn't worry about Natalie. She'll have enough to eat.

There'll be 100 in the cast.

The First First Night

'Barretts of Wimpole Street' Warmly Greeted at the Gayety

A WARMLY affectionate audience last night greeted the return of Actors' Equity members to a downtown theater when Susan Peters opened a two-week stay in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" at the Gayety Theater, sparkling in fresh paint, good will and a new dignity.

It was an occasion on which the audience played almost as much of a role as the players. It was an immensely friendly audience which filled the orchestra floor and first balcony and one could sense, before the curtain and during the intermission, a feeling of relief in the crowd.

They had gathered to see a valiant and lovely young actress in a romantic comedy the late Rudolf Besier had written in London 20 years ago

But they also had gathered to take a degree of pride in the fact that at last one of the oldest arts had returned to the Capital of our United States. One noted a good sprinkling of the diplomatic set as well as of the Negro community. For both of these groups, to avoid embarrassment to our visitors and fellow Americans alike, the actors had taken their precedent-shattering step three years before. It was, in a sense, a triumph for the one-time vagabonds who once had been told, in old New York, "there is a little church around the corner which might marry you." The actors have come a long way

The play is a tender, gently humorous story of how Elizabeth escaped the tyranny of her father and found refuge in the assured, forceful love of a poet more noted than herself, Robert Browning. As a romantic and quiet comedy, Besier's three-act play has stood the test of time well.

As for the production itself, one is reminded of Shakespeare's will, in which he left his second-best bed to his widow. While that "second best" phrase has bothered many probers, Shakespeare intended it as no slap at his Anne. He used the phrase, as did many another will of the period, descriptively. Anne was well cared for by her dower rights and by "second best bed," Shakespeare simply meant "second best." That is the way one uses the term here, descriptive, not derogatory, just valuation.

But that the cast and production did not represent the very best in the American theater, was indeed "second best," was somehow not the point last night.

Apart from Miss Peters, who has a lovely sincerity and charm in the role, the cast was nothing much nor was the setting above adequate rep. Surely the Moulton-Barretts of 50 Wimpole Street were more alike physically and in speech than Producer John Kenley's cast. I'm willing to admit that attention to this casting detail is demanding and that some of our better Gotham plays are no better spoken; the fact remains that a variety of accents and an inability to thrill with the voice are major obstacles in this production.

As for the Gayety, it looks very well in its green-gilt decor and there's a pleasant air of luxury in the carpets and general spaciousness. Very few tried the second balcony benches, but watching a scene from those uncomfortable stalls I thought the stage looked well. The acoustics seem fine and you'll like the ample lobby space. you'll also like Miss Peters.

Sterling Music Is Played At Phillips Gallery Recital

By Paul Hume

The music played last night at the Phillips Gallery was a sterling collection of works for piano and violin.

Odette Hertz was the violinist, with the Rev. Russell Woollen of Catholic University as pianist. Sonatas by Mozart, Brahms, and Francis Poulenc joined David Diamond's Canticle to comprise four diverse styles.

In all but Brahms, style was present in good measure. Mozart's violin sonatas, and he wrote almost 40 of them, are scattered throughout his other music. The A Major opus heard last night is the next to the last on the list. It dates from the period of the last four symphonies.

In its three movements the piano is by far the dominant instrument. The music is of remarkable depth even for Mozart in his last years. Except for scattered measures throughout its pages, the violin playing failed to sound convincing. The piano was handled with great skill.

In Diamond's Canticle, introduced here several years ago by Tossy Spivakosky for whom it was written, Miss Hertz found more congenial ground. Her tone improved and her intonation, which faltered seriously most of the evening, was steadier.

Her tone is of moderate size, but attractive in sustained passages. In rapid movements it loses quality, and fails to achieve proper pitch, both in scale lines and larger intervals. Miss Hertz seems to know her way around the music she plays well enough, but has difficulty communicating this because her technique does not serve her sufficiently.

Matters improved again in the Poulenc sonata, though the same faults were apparent. Father Wollen played this music with perfect understanding and control, as did the Diamond and Mozart.

Neither artist gave any warmth to Brahms' last sonata, the D Minor. Only in the slow movement was something like repose achieved. The scherzo dazzled, but again, without style.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Blue Plate Special:

Orlando, Fla., March 6—The bat man is making the tour of the Florida training camps. He's Hal Schumacher whose hate for the hitters when he was pitching for the Giants, has melted into the fond hope that they'll bang many a home run—if they're using his kind of bat.

Schumacher is now the supersalesman of a bat-making firm that specializes in Adirondack white ash, and he has weaned many a ball player away from the standard bat of a rival firm. Ninety percent of the hitters in the majors are still swinging Louisville Sluggers, but Schumacher has been making some inroads. It used to be 100 percent.

POVICH

Walker Cooper, Johnny Mize and Sid Gordon switched to Schumacher's product three years ago and he likes to point to their lusty batting averages.

"Ball players don't switch easily," explained Schumacher, "but I like to get 'em when they're in a slump. Then they're desperate and they'll try anything. That's when I get my foot in the door. All I have to do is be patient. Sooner or later they all slump."

BUCKY HARRIS one season as a manager in the Pacific Coast League has put its mark on the Nats. He brought along four Coast Leaguers, Pitcher Steve Nagy, Catcher Mickey Grasso, Outfielder Irv Noren and Infielder George Genovese when he knew he would return to Washington as manager.

The four players stood Clark Griffith $100,000. In each case, Griffith accepted Harris' judgment on the quartet. The only one he questioned the wisdom of buying was Genovese, who had hit only .259 for the Hollywood club.

"Don't worry about Genovese," said Harris, "I've seen a lot of him all season. I like everything about him as an infielder and he's not that bad a hitter. I've seen him plenty."

The other day in the Nats' hotel lobby a little fellow walked up to Harris and said "Hello, Bucky." Harris gave the fellow a polite "Hello," and awkwardly found nothing else to say to him. The chap walked away and Harris asked a baseball writer, "Who was that fellow."

Said the baseball writer: "That was George Genovese."

A BIT LATER Harris sought Genovese out to renew their conversation, and gave him a hearty welcome to the Washington club. "Didn't recognize you at first," he explained, "but I'm glad to have you with me this year instead of against me like last year."

Harris, satisfied about Genovese's ability to play shortstop, but thinking in terms of the Nats, asked the player if he liked to play second base. Genovese said, "Sure, but I've been mostly a shortstop. I hope you can give me some tips about playing second."

In his own time second only to Charley Gehringer among American League second basemen, Harris was forced to smile. "If it's some ideas on playing second base you want, you've come to the right man," he said. "I'm full of that subject, and if I can't help a young second baseman I never learned anything in my time."

Harris had one prime tip for Genovese. "The toughest play is getting over to the bag for the throw in the middle of those double plays. So you play closer to the bag than perhaps you ought to. That's cheating, my boy, and it is a big help to a second baseman."

JIMMY BURNS of the Miami Herald relates that Gulfstream Park officials turned down an elephant race as an added attraction of the track's opening the other day. It recalled to him the year that the Charleston, S. C., track resorted to all sorts of bizarre features.

To revive the dwindling attendance the Charleston officials staged parachute jumps, man racing against horse, and other attractions. Finally the day was reached when five camels were matched for a mile race around the track.

"Action with the bookies centered on a camel named Ben Ali. He took the lead and in the jargon of the turf, 'never looked back.'

"The distraught bookies figured they'd been jobbed by the Arab riders of the four camels that finished behind the winner. And then it developed Ben Ali was the 'bell camel.' The others had been taught to follow the bell camel.

"'Sahib, you couldn't have driven them past Ben Ali with a bull whip,' one of the Arab drivers later explained."

Rookie of Year Tag Proved 'Kiss of Death' for Roach

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

ON THE SAME DAY that Boxer Lavern Roach met his tragic death, the March issue of Ring magazine announced it was abandoning its "Rookie of the Year" award, which Roach won in 1948, with these prophetic words: . . . "The publisher discovered that the award was the kiss of death. . . . Roach was the winner in 1948, but the accolade proved too big a handicap. The Garden threw Roach in with the late Marcel Cerdan, who knocked him out in the eighth round . . . The fight never should have been booked. It doubtless would not have been put on if Roach had not won the rookie award. Greed and circumstances combined to give Roach a setback from which perhaps he will not recover" . . . The Hoya, student publication at Georgetown, seriously questions whether the Hilltoppers get their money's worth in sports out of the student activity fee . . . Compared to the $15 cost at Maryland, the Hoyas, who pay $50 for their student activities book, got to see two home football games and seven home basketball games while Terps' students saw four home football games and 12 home basketball games this season . . . Hoya students also had to pay an additional fee of 50 cents for each attraction . . .

NORTH CAROLINA STATE'S championship basketball team may be getting too big for its Southern Conference britches . . . Coach Everett Case's Aces have won four straight league titles and, only in Raleigh, N. C., home of the school, is the accomplishment being appreciated . . . Other league schools, unable to cope with the champs and unwilling to do too much about it, are tired of being whipped by the Wolfpack and may drop them from their schedules, which is exactly what happened in football with Notre Dame and its Big Ten neighbors . . . Harold Ifshin of Silver Spring forwards his suggestion to cut out stalling tactics of basketball teams in the last 2 minutes: Why not give a team 20 or 30 seconds in the last 2 minutes to take a shot at the basket or lose the ball? . . . "I think this will make the last few minutes of a game interesting," he writes, "and prevent excessive fouling, for a team won't foul, knowing that in a few seconds it will get a chance at possession of the ball." . . .

'New' DiMag Antithesis of Painful Joe Of Year Ago

By Joe Reichler

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6 (AP). A year ago this month Joe DiMaggio's entire baseball career was shrouded in doubt. Today, the great New York Yankee outfielder is in such fine shape he feels he can play on indefinitely.

No fooling. Those Baltimore newsmen and photographers who waxed indignant over DiMag's outburst of temper when they attemped to interview him on one of his numerous trips to Johns Hopkins Hospital should see him now.

They'd form a different opinion of the worried and haggard fellow who glowered at them and rasped, "can't you guys leave me alone? You're driving me batty."

The DiMaggio of today is his old self—genial, gracious and eager to please. No autograph fan departs without obtaining Joe's signature. No camera fiend gets away without his picture of the Yankee Clipper. And no reporter leaves without getting a sincere, honest reply to his query.

Sees Fine Season Ahead

He has practically forgotten the pain and untold suffering caused by an inflamed right heel that stubbornly refused to yield to treatment and care of some of the best medical men in the field a year ago.

In the pink of condition after a restful winter in his native San Francisco, the 35-year-old DiMag predicted a fine season for himself.

"The way I feel now," he said with an air of confidence, "I'm going to play a full 154 games, something I've been able to do only once in 11 years. Honestly, I never felt better in my life. My legs and body are strong. My heel is in perfect condition. In fact, it feels as though nothing ever has happened to it."

Joe hasn't spared himself a bit during the first week of conditioning. Except for throwing, the $100,000 salaried star worked as hard as the most eager rookie in camp. He weighs 197 pounds stripped and would like to add three more by opening day.

Joe attributes his fine condition to his decision to leave New York, and spend the winter months in California, away from the night life and excitement of the big city.

"The few months in California

Rookie Looks Like Answer To Outfield Problems

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 6.—As if the $70,000 they paid for him was not enough to enlist the interest of the Nat's bosses, Rookie Irvin Noren is rapping for attention in another way—with his bat. Today he put five batting-practice homers over the right field wall.

It is no inconsiderable 350-yard poke to the 15-foot barrier, but Noren's wallops went sailing out of the park in confusion. He put on his best show for Manager Bucky Harris in his last turn at bat.

Taking the last of his allotted swings, Noren popped up and started to leave the batting cage. Harris, watching him, said, "Don't quit on that, take one more rap." Nothing loath, Noren sent a 400-foot drive sailing out of the park.

He'll Play in Middle

There's high confidence in the Nats' camp that in Noren they acquired the solution to some of their outfield troubles. Harris will install him in centerfield and says he feels no worries on that score.

"Even if Noren flops," said Harris, "I'll always believe he should have been a great ball player."

Gil Coan, newly-arrived, took his first workout today and joined Noren, Eddie Robinson and Sherry Robertson at whacking the ball over the fence in right. Coan was proudest, though, of one wallop to the deepest part of center field that hit the wall on the fly.

Harris is introducing a new note in spring training route, due to the still dismal condition of the Tinker Field diamond, which resembles a ploughed field. He's ordering infield practice as the first piece of daily business, to enable his infielders to get in some work before the sod is completely rutted by spikes.

Take It Slow with Nagy

Pitcher Fred Nagy is being brought along slowly by Harris in deference to a trick shoulder. Nagy, a chunky southpaw whom Harris liked in the Coast League, is being groomed as a starting pitcher in view of the lack of that commodity, and the Nats' manager is permitting him to work at his own pleasure.

Nagy and his fellow southpaw, Mickey Harris, are the only two pitchers on the squad who have not yet served them up to the batters in the daily workouts . . . Today the Nats had six pitchers, including Buck Newsom, working from the mound, and the mechanical pitching contraption has been stored for the season . . . Eddie Yost, Sam Dente, Sherry Robertson and Eddie Robinson were the starting quartet in infield drill . . . Al Kozar, recently arrived, will soon replace Robertson . . . Clyde Vollmer and Al Evans were the only guys to put one out of the park in the left field sector . . . Clark Griffith today gave up on the Cuban pitcher, Sandalio Consuegra, who wants a bonus before he reports . . . So few are the starting pitchers that Harris may keep every rookie now with the club on the squad until May 15, the date when he must cut down to the 25-player limit.

Villanova Wins Over Stubborn Hoyas, 82-72

Special Dispatch to The Post

Villanova, Pa., March 6.—Stubborn Georgetown showed marked improvement against Villanova here tonight but wound up on the short end of an 82-72 count before 5000.

The visitors dropped an earlier decision to the powerful Wildcats, 73 to 45.

Villanova's All-American Paul Arizin, who scored 33 points in the first meeting in Washington, tallied 27 points but eight of them were in the last two minutes of the game.

Perry Del Purgatorio, Union City, N. J., topped Arizin's total by one, marking the first time in his four years that he won scoring honors. In the first Georgetown game, Del made exactly two points.

His performance really was the difference and nullified the scoring efforts of Tommy O'Keefe and Johnny Brown who each made 20 points.

O'Keefe's 20th point was the 1000th in his four-year varsity career at Georgetown. He closes it tomorrow night at Princeton when the Hoyas wind up their season against the Ivy League champions. Georgetown goes into its final with a 12-11 mark.

Army Champs Win 1st Game

Brooks Army Medical Center, defending champions in the All-Army basketball championships, representing the Fourth Army, nosed out Fort Lewis' Sixth Army team, 60-58, in a first-round game last night on the Fort Belvoir court.

The Fifth Army took a seesaw decision over the Third Army 59-55 with neither team holding more than a 6-point advantage at any point.

Capt. Julian Phillips scored 24 points to pace the losers while M/Sergt. Albert Kisho had 19 for the Fifth Army.

Another first-round game had the Second Army romping to a 53-39 win over Austria, leading all the way. Pfc. August Ollrich, Willie Cerf paced the Second Army with 19 and 13 while Corpl. Charles Gill led Austria with 13.

Major Leaguer for 12 Years

Player's Player, That's Enos Slaughter, Who at 34 Is Cards' Perennial Rookie

By Whitney Martin

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6, (AP).—Enos Slaughter was wearing a plastic reducing suit under his regular Cardinal uniform, although he didn't seem to need it much.

The weight-melter covered him from neck to ankles, and was water tight. Consequently, after a couple of hours under the St. Petersburg sun, he was water-jacketed. The perspiration settled in pools, bulging here and there about his anatomy.

He ran over to the bench—Enos Slaughter always runs—and flopped down with a whooshing sound. If the suit had had any holes in it he would have looked like a lawn sprinkler.

"Great game," he said positively. "A young man's game. That's why I love it. The old fellows should get out."

Slaughter is crowding 34, and has been a major leaguer for a dozen years. Yet he has the enthusiasm of an 18-year-old, and can run most 18-year-olds right out of a ball park.

He's never out of condition. From October to March, he tramps the Carolina hills and wods. As another player who accompanied him on a hunting expedition remarked in awe: "He doesn't shoot quail; he runs them down!"

So the Old Rock of the St. Louis club is starting his thirteenth campaign as a perfect physical specimen, hard and tough and spirited, and although the sheer drive and force of his play subjects him to injuries which would make a less stalwart athlete look for a nice, safe job like training tigers, it's a good guess he's good for several more fine years under the big top

Dynamite Dud At Turner's

Johnny Lemons, New York featherweight, decisioned Little Dynamite in the feature eight-round bout last night at Turner's Arena to gain revenge for a loss to Dynamite two weeks ago.

It was Dynamite's second loss in 19 pro fights. Dynamite weighed 129½, and Lemons 126½ for the bout.

Another eight-rounder saw Freddie Smith, another New York featherweight, take an easy decision over Pat Thomas of Washington. It was Thomas' third loss in 12 starts.

An all-local middleweight bout had Roland Randall scoring a TKO over Johnny Hansbury in the seventh round of a scheduled eight rounder.

In the preliminaries, Sam Kelsey, local 145-pounder, knocked out Brooklyn's Harry Fields in 2:45 of the second round of a scheduled six, and Jimmy O'Brien of Baltimore decisioned Washington's Billy Hickerson in a four.

Bill Guthrie Dead; Former A. L. Umpire

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—William Guthrie, 64, former American League baseball umpire, was found dead today in his hotel room.

Guthrie was released as an American League umpire in 1933 after serving five years. A cousin, Mrs. Della Kilgallon, said Guthrie had worked as a steamfitter since 1940.

Ellis Kinder Breaks a Rib

Sarasota, Fla., March 6 (AP).—Boston's Red Sox suffered a setback today after it became known righthanded Pitcher Ellis Kinder has suffered a broken rib and would be out of action for some time.

Kinder was struck by a batted ball while jogging in the outfield.

At first it was thought Kinder, who surprised with 23 victories last season when the Sox lost the American League pennant on the last day of the campaign, had been bruised. However, an X-ray disclosed the fracture.

Indians Learn Rules

Tucson, Ariz., March 6 (AP).—Busiest man in the Cleveland Indians camp today was American League Umpire Bill Summers.

It was his job to illustrate and explain the 1950 rules changes.

Tribe pitchers were specially interested in anything that might harm or help their pick-off plays, a specialty for which they have become well known the past few years.

Yogi Still Won't Sign

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6 (AP) Yogi Berra, the Yankees' boldout catcher, held an hour conference today with New York General Manager George Weiss without coming to an agreement on salary terms.

Yogi, who flew in from St. Louis for the confab, said he was offered "a slight raise" but that it wasn't enough. It's reported that Berra is demanding $22,000. He reportedly received $14,000 last season.

Cooney's Club Wins

Bradenton, Fla., March 6 (AP).—For the second straight day Coach John Cooney's Boston Braves blanked Jimmy Brown's unit, 2-0, today in an eight-inning intrasquad practice game.

Each side used four pitchers and the Cooney's clouted ace Johnny Sain for their first tally in the second inning when Willard Marshall and Rookie First Baseman Hank Ertman doubled consecutively. Ertman's triple and Catcher Walt Linden's single off Bob Hall provided the other tally in the seventh.

16,979 See Rocca, Stanlee Draw

New York, March 6 (AP).—Antonio Rocca and Gene Stanlee wrestled to a draw tonight at Madison Square Garden before 16,979 fans.

The exhibition was stopped at 11 o'clock because of the curfew law which forbids wrestling to continue after that hour. It grossed $51,962.81. The net was $41,075.05.

Philadelphia, March 6 (AP).—Kid Gavilan won a split 10-round decision over Philadelphia's Otis Graham tonight. Gavilan weighed 148½, Graham 149½.

7 D. C. Fighters Win N. Y. Bouts

New York, March 6.—With only Bunky Frazier falling by the wayside, seven of Washington's eight Golden Gloversons survived the opening round of the Eastern tournament here today.

Frazier, 126-pounder who was voted Washington's outstanding boxer, had the misfortune to meet Noel Humphries, Hunting, W. Va., only defending champion in the tourney and lost a decision.

Walt Stipanovich, 160-pound Quantico Marine led the five D. C. boys who had to fight their way into the quarterfinal round by scoring the day's only clean knockout. He floored Jimmy Raymond, Buffalo, in the second round.

Paul Nicol scored a TKO over Vince Carbone, Syracuse, in 24 seconds of the third round. Mario de Santis, Eldridge Thompson and Willie Davis gained decisions.

Norval Lee and Bobby Leeper drew first round byes.

The Eddie Sawyer Story

On the Field or in College, the Professor Teaches Right Things at the Right Time

Editor's Note: The writer of these articles has covered baseball in Philadelphia for many years as sport writer and radio commentator. This is the second of a series.

By Harry Robert

HOLLYWOOD TURNED OUT a diverting comedy about baseball last year: "It Happens Every Spring."

It was about a young professor who accidentally discovered a new chemical. Applied to a baseball, the solution caused the ball to dart over, under or around a wooden bat. Not even a .367 slugger could get a foul tip off it.

The young professor, secretly massaging baseballs with his formula, became a sensational big league pitcher. It was a fantastic movie but good fun.

The movie didn't go so far as to promote the professor as manager of a big league team. The audience might not have stood for that.

It is not the phantasy of a scenario writer that the Philadelphia Phillies, of the National League, are managed by a genuine college professor — Edwin Melby Sawyer, B. S., M. S.

SAWYER

Manager-Professor Sawyer, late of the halls of higher learning at Ithaca College in New York State, is no freak. He will tell you that there is not so much difference between handling young men in college and handling them on the ball field.

The idea in both places is to teach the young man to do the right thing at the right time, says Professor Sawyer.

THE SUBJECTS he taught at Ithaca College were biology, physiology and zoology. The Phillies manager does not try to tell you that these courses will bring a puny batting average up to .300 or put extra zip on a high hard pitch. But his classical and scientific background has been invaluable to Prof. Sawyer.

Time will tell whether his learning will pay off in a pennant for the Phils. In his first full season the Phils finished in third place, their best showing since 1917.

Sawyer has remarkable success with young ball players. The average age of the Phillies last season was only 23½ years, even including such veterans as Schoolboy Rowe, 38, and Ken Heintzelman, 34. Actually, Prof. Sawyer was bossing the "child team" of the majors.

"I am still teaching," says Sawyer.

And what is the best method of teaching college students or ball players?

"Repetition," says the professor. "And then more repetition. That and letting the youngsters do things for themselves, even when they make mistakes. The best way, unfortunately, is the hard way. It seems the only way some boys can learn is to start out by doing almost everything wrong."

Sawyer believes ball players ought to do more thinking for themselves, with less "master-minding" from the bench.

Often, when Sawyer lets his boys do their own thinking, they get the team into hot water. Yet the young Phils showed a surprising ability to bounce back from setbacks and losing streaks.

"I've made it an unbreakable rule never to use sarcasm," he said, "and that goes for college teaching as well as baseball."

WHEN A PLAYER makes a mistake, Sawyer says nothing to him at the time.

"He feels badly enough," says Sawyer. "Usually I talk to him

NBA Reveals 12-Club Plan For Playoff

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—The National Basketball Association today announced plans for its post-season championship playoffs which will carry a $75,000 pool.

The four top-finishing teams in each of the 17-club circuit's three divisions, Eastern, Central and Western, will begin the playoffs March 21.

Five series will be required to determine the champion, the first four being two-out-of-three affairs, and the title showdown, four out of seven.

The schedule includes:

Series A—Between first and fourth-place teams in each division.

Series B—Between second and third-place teams in each division.

Series C—Between winners of Series A and B in each division.

Series D—Between the two of the three Series C winners with the lower regular season percentages (the high percentage team standing by).

Series E—The championship series, between Series D winner and the stand-by team.

Only Syracuse of the Eastern Division has a first-place berth clinched. In the preliminary series, the team with the highest percentage has the option of playing the first and third games at home.

The playoff champion will receive $7500 and the loser $5000. In Series D, $4000 goes to the winner and $3000 to the loser, with the stand-by teams getting $3000. In Series A, B and C, each winner gets $2500 and the losing team $2000. Regular season divisional leaders and runners-up will get $2500 and $1500, respectively.

Chamblin's Sister Leona Wins Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, March 6.—Trainer Dan Chamblin of Leesburg, Va., saddled his third and fourth winners of the two-day old Charles Town meeting this afternoon.

He sent J. N. Fishback's Sister Leona postward in the Hyattsville purse featuring the program, and the 5-year-old daughter of Roman bounced along in front to win by five lengths.

Second in the field of eight was Stanley Greene, jr.'s Grand Surprise, a length in advance of M. I. Brooks' Sunny South.

Sister Leona, the fourth winner for Jockey Jimmy Baird, was clocked in :50 3/5 for the about 4½ furlongs and returned a win mutuel of $3.80.

The winning mare drew out gradually throughout the running. Jockey Eddie Danhauer tried desperately to make Grand Surprise keep up but the 7-year-old could not cope with the leader. Sunny South, never far back, closed willingly to be third.

The Chamblin-Baird combination was successful for the first time today in the opening event. Mrs. E. S. Hineman's King Naaman was the horse and he came from behind to win by three parts of a length much to the delight of those who installed him a $3.60 favorite.

Those who coupled King Naaman with B. S. Hall's Mr. Elmer, winner of the second race, took down a $12 pay-off on the daily double.

Jockey Fred Kratz, one time steeplechase rider, shared the saddle honors with Baird. The Baltimore boy won the fifth with J. N. Barnes' Fetch-It and the seventh with High Heart, owned and trained by Mrs. G. A. Saportas, jr., who also saddled Fetch-It.

Charles Town Strives To Ban Cheap Horses

Charles Town, W. Va., March 6.—Scratches for today's program were delayed some three hours while President A. J. Boyle, Charles Town Jockey Club, conferred with officials in an effort to eliminate some of the cheap horses on the card.

However, the program finally stood as drawn yesterday. Boyle will meet later with members of the West Virginia Racing Commission in an effort to draft a ruling which would put better horses on future programs.

Boyle said, "I'm making a determined effort to give the public the best racing available here. This can be accomplished only by eliminating horses which habitually have run poorly in cheap claiming company."

Bauer Sisters Have No Desire To Turn Pro

Jacksonville, Fla., March 6 (AP).—The golfing Bauer sisters from Midland, Tex., don't want to turn pro—and their father doesn't want them to, either.

"I just want to be the best woman golfer in the world," says 16-year-old, 124-pound Marlene.

And 22-year-old, 104-pound Alice seems to feel the same way.

Dave Bauer, the father, who makes all their golfing decision, said after the two gave an exhibition here:

"I want them to play in all the big tournaments, including the one open to pros; but I want them to stay amateurs."

Generals Favored to Repeat

Conference Tourney Finals Five W & L Wrestlers Reach

Advancing five of its eight matmen into the final round, Washington and Lee University assumed the role of favorite in the thirteenth annual Southern Conference wrestling tournament which opened at College Park yesterday.

The Generals picked up two points on falls during the first two rounds, and also advanced another grappler into the consolation matches which will be held today at 3:30 p. m. The eight final bouts will start at 7:30 p. m.

Placing four men in the finals, VMI also put three others in the consolation round and retained a chance to snatch the title which Washington and Lee has won the past two years.

The eight remaining schools are already out of championship consideration. Maryland and North Carolina, closest competitors to the leaders, have placed only two matmen in the final round.

Maryland held a slim point lead going into the final round as a result of having scored three falls in the first round. Washington and Lee was second with two, followed by The Citadel, Duke, North Carolina and VMI, all with one tally.

Both of the Generals' points were chalked up by 320-pound Jerry Jack as he won a pair of fall victories yesterday, the only athlete to perform the feat.

Another General grappler, Joe Sconce, scored three victories to advance to the finals.

Local Club Well Represented In Team Casting Tournament

By Ralph Murdock

Enthusiasm is running high among casters who will participate in the team tournament, which starts Saturday, 5 p. m., at the Armory as a feature of the Sportsmen's Show.

Murdock

The National Capital Casting Club will be represented by such well-known casters as Jay Reed (All-American), Perry (Hap) Nichols, Cliff Netherton, Benny Dement, Jack Nelson and Gregory Sexton.

The tournament casting game is one of the few sporting events in which sex, youth or age is not a determining factor. For instance, Gregory Sexton is only 15 years old but he is well on the way to becoming one of the best of casters.

Bruce Brubaker, a member of the Harrisburg Hunter's and Angler's Association team which competes in the tournament, is nationally known as one of the few casters, who, in competition, have made perfect scores in the ⅝-ounce bait skish plug event. Last, but not least, Miss Joan Salvato, 1949 National Women's Accuracy Bait Casting champion, member of the Patterson Casting Club, will compete and display her wares with a casting rod. Nuff sed.

Mild weather along the North Carolina coast is expected to bring the channel bass in earlier this year. Guides predict the bronze beauties will be in Oregon Inlet by the last week in March.

Ice which formed along the shore lines of the South and Severn Rivers killed the chances of the yellow perch anglers over the weekend. Several small boats were so entrenched that they could not be removed from the ice. Lower temperatures should alter this situation in the next few days. We are predicting fair catches of yellow neds over the coming weekend, weather permitting.

Diesels for Dixie!

Diesel locomotives...like dollars...don't grow on trees. Those 603 powerful Diesel units the Southern Railway System now has in service and on order cost about $80 million!

That's a lot of money. But it bought a lot of modern horsepower...to give a modern fast-growing Dixieland the best in transportation service.

These "Diesels for Dixie" are just one indication of our determination to keep pace with the increasing transportation needs of the South.

To do that takes a lot of money. And it takes FAITH. Faith in the bright future of Dixie. Faith that some day soon our country will insist, in the public interest, that all forms of commercial intercity transportation must stand independently on their own financial feet...without support from the taxpayer...as only the railroads now do.

310,000 Civil Service Job Openings Expected In 1951 Fiscal Year

Civil Service expects to fill 310,000 Federal jobs during the 1951 fiscal year, which begins on July 1. About 40,000 of the placements will be made by the central office here.

They sound like enormous figures. They aren't in Government. In fact, they would be the smallest number of placements made in more than 10 years.

These are plain facts: (1) It will become increasingly difficult to land a Federal job, and (2) competition will be keener for the available jobs. Here's why:

The commission made 504,660 placements in the 1949 fiscal year, and it expects to fill more than 400,000 jobs during this fiscal year of 1950. But during the 1951 fiscal year the commission expects more people will apply for the fewer openings than did in '49, and either have or will in '50.

In a nutshell, people are holding onto their Federal jobs. Employe turnover is now down to the lowest level in years.

This has resulted in a smaller workload for the commission. The commission has agreed to withdraw its request for a $350,000 deficiency to meet the cost of last year's pay raise and it will absorb the entire cost out of available funds. Furthermore, it has voluntarily agreed to take a cut of $516,000 in its proposed 1951 budget as proposed by the President.

Instead of increasing its staff by more than 100 employes, the commission will do well to maintain its present personnel strength. It has agreed to cut its investigative staff from 1295 to 984 employes. The one big increase of 268 new employes would be in its classification division.

LEAVE: The commission wasn't ordered to wipe out all accumulated annual leave of its 3800 employes during House Appropriations Committee hearings on its 1951 budget. Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.), subcommittee chairman, merely asked how long it would take to get leave on a current basis "without causing any undue hardship on the agency."

Lawson A Moyer pointed that the dollar value of accumulated leave of commission employes amounted to $2,146,434. He explained that a recent survey had revealed the average commission employe here was taking 23 days of leave annually. In other words, the leave accumulation is slowly growing.

EMPLOYE NOTES: The number of Federal workers who appeal their lay-off notices is 300 percent greater than the commission predicted . . . Commissioner James M. Mitchell told the House committee that the commission would do more; not less of the Government's recruitment and examining work . . . The Hoover Commission favors more recruitment and examining by individual agencies . . . Civil Service last year rejected requests by both agencies and employes for higher grade classifications that would have cost two million dollars annually in higher salaries.

VA: Several members of Congress may try to get a last-minute appropriation for the Veterans Administration to prevent the lay-off of 7800 employes. Meantime, the 30-day notices are being written and they will go out Friday.

At General Services, Thomas L. Peyton has been appointed director of the real property disposal division, and Arthur A. May is the new director of the real property appraisal division . . . Philip F. Maguire, formerly of the White House staff, has joined David Reich, formerly of Justice, and Arthur M. The Society for Personnel Administration will discuss staffing of Government personnel offices at 7:30 p. m. this evening in the Archives auditorium. Among the speakers will be: Daniel J. Recreation Site, Slum Plan Show District Feud

D. C. Commissioners, Park Heads Vie For Authority, With 'Hill' as Arena

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporters

Those fighting Commissioners are at it again!

In one corner are the District Commissioners. In another corner are the National Capital Park and Planning Commissioners.

But a man whose duties take him into both corners—Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young—says things aren't as bad as they sound. General Young is a member of both commissions.

New reports of strain between the two commissions came to light in a transcript from the House Appropriations Committee on recent planning commission budget hearings.

The suggestion of strained relations between the two agencies was prompted by questioning of Representative John Phillips (R., Calif.). The points involve a proposed Cleveland Park recreation site, and the long-stymied Marshall Heights redevelopment plan. Phillips took the lead in the move, successful to date, to prevent an appropriation to make Marshall Heights the first postwar Washington slum clearance area.

In quizzing planning commission officials February 23, Representative Phillips asked:

"Do you not think that the middle class sections or the better class sections also need parks or playgrounds?"

"Resisance" Denied

Phillips then asked why the planning agency had not bought five acres of the Alexander Graham Bell estate, now owned by the Chinese Embassy, to be a recreation area for Cleveland Park children.

"I understand you have resisted that on request," Phillips said.

"Instead of resisting it we have advocated it for the last four years," replied A. E. Demaray, acting executive officer of the planning commission. "The resistance comes from the District Commissioners."

General Young conceded the District Commissioners had turned the project down.

Nolan charged the Commissioners had passed up a bargain in a previous opportunity to buy the property.

Asked by Phillips if the site might still be purchased, Nolen aswered, "We cannot talk until we have 'money in the bank.'"

Marshall Hgts. Project

Phillips recalled that last year in denying funds for the Marshall Heights redevelopment project, the House Appropriations Committee urged the District Commissioners to withdraw their approval of the project in favor of seeing that the area got adequate water, sewer, street, and other public facilities.

General Young said last night that the District Commissioners and the Planning Commissioners are not in disagreement. He said any disagreement is between the two agencies and the House Committee.

General Young added the District Commissioners are now legally bound to continue the freeze on Marshall Heights utilities improvements.

When Phillips asked why the freeze had not been lifted, Nolan quoted a letter written to the District Commissioners from Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) requesting them not to lift the freeze order.

At this point Phillips suggested that maybe the Appropriations group should freeze Planning Commission funds "since the feeling is that this committee is not of sufficient importance to pay any attention to suggestions made by it."

Cafe Holdup Plot Charged To Three Men

Police Trap Pair Outside Restaurant; Third Arrested Later

Seven robbery squad detectives, tipped off in advance, arrested two men early yesterday when they allegedly prepared to rob a restaurant at 1524 K st. nw., at closing time.

Later, the detectives picked up a third man. All three were arraigned before United States Commissioner C. S. Lawrence and held in $10,000 bond each, their cases continued until March 15.

At arraignment, one of the men, Albert Senior, jr., 28, of 612 8th st. sw., charged police beat him with blackjacks to force a confession from him. Commissioner Lawrence told him this was a subject for introduction at his possible trial.

Lowry

Senior

Stramer

However, the commissioner informed Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, of Senior's charge, and Major Barrett ordered an immediate investigation. Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, chief of the robbery squad, denied that Senior had been beaten.

The other two defendants are James A. Lowry, 25, of 668 B st. se., and Bela Aloysius Stramer, 36, of 1469 U st. se.

Police said that at 12:30 a. m. seven detectives were "planted" outside Aaron's Restaurant, 1524 K st. nw. Senior alighted from a cab, police said, and walked to the door of the restaurant, where he dropped a gun he was carrying.

Picking up the weapon, the detectives said, Senior walked back to the cab, spoke briefly with Lowry, who then took the gun and also alighted. As they walked toward the restaurant, they were surrounded and arrested. Stramer, said by police to have been in on planning the proposed holdup, was arrested later.

Police said Stramer was once indicted here for robbery of a High's Ice Cream store but that the charge was dropped after he was committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Citizens Back 5-Day Week For Police

Minnesota Ave., Michigan Ave. and Columbia Heights Vote for 40 Hours

Three citizen associations last night passed resolutions calling for a five-day, 40-hour week for Metropolitan policemen.

Full indorsement of the proposal was voted by the Minnesota Center Citizens Association meeting at the City Bank, 3839 Minnesota ave. ne.

Another resolution was approved by members of the Michigan Park Association.

Both groups will write letters to the District Commissioners and to Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police.

Third group to indorse the 40-hour week was Columbia Heights Citizens Association which met at Columbia Heights Christian Church, 435 Park rd. nw.

Meeting at Bunker Hill Elementary School, 14th st. and Michigan ave. ne., the Michigan Association also urged abolition of personal property tax and favored radios on streetcars and buses. Mrs. John Bayley was appointed chairman of the association's committee on education and recreation.

Columbia Heights

Members of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night opposed elimination of No. 52 streetcars on the 14th street line, maintaining these cars are essential to carry passengers into the downtown shopping areas.

George H. Brown was appointed to attend the Public Utilities Commission hearing March 13 to oppose moval. If the No. 52 cars are removed streetcars will travel down 14th street to Pennsylvania avenue before turning to the center of town.

The 52 members that met at Columbia Heights Christian Church Hall, 1435 Park rd. nw., also indorsed the Kefauver bill for home rule.

National Gateway

G. C. Vincent, president, urged members of the National Gateway Citizens Association at a meeting last night to read a booklet of the Greater Woodridge Land Covenant Association and to join in that organization's land-acquisition activities. The Gateway group met at Christ Church, 28th and Douglas sts. ne.

Dupont Circle

Complete protection from the public for Admiral Dupont's statue in Dupont Circle was asked yesterday by the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Moved away when construction on the Dupont Circle underpass was started, the statue will be replaced when the underpass is finished.

Harral Mulliken, who offered the motion, said great damage had been done to the statue because the "general public" has had access to it for many years. A protecting barrier of some sort was suggested.

Southwest Citizens

A demand to the Senate District Committee that southbound trucks be routed on Independence ave. to 14th st. sw., instead of on Maryland ave. and C st., was voted last night by the Southwest Citizens Association.

The group, with 102 persons present, met in the library of Jefferson Junior High School.

The association also went on record as favoring installation of new traffic light signals at 7th and Maine aves. sw., and 6th and M sts. sw.

Wives Protest Rental Change For Veterans at Maryland U.

Wives of veterans studying at the University of Maryland yesterday drafted a mass protest against rent changes for their apartments near the campus.

"The majority of us," 66 of the wives declared in a letter to Dean of Men Geary Eppley, director of student welfare, "live, or better expressed, try to live on $120 a month."

They said the decision to change the basis on which rentals are determined will hit principally the veteran-student with the least income.

It will mean a 50 percent increase in rent for him, the wives wrote, and this "is beyond reason" and an increase "we simply cannot afford."

Married Veteran-students live in barrack-type temporary buildings partitioned into apartments. Some are efficiency apartments with no bedroom. Others have one bedroom.

There are 13 buildings, acquired as war surplus, and each unit contains 13 apartments—a total of 104 apartments. They are located on Dickinson ave., in College Park, Md., on property owned by the university.

Married veteran-students now pay rentals ranging from $22.50 to $42.50, based on financial status.

However, on July 1, the university has announced, it will substitute a system of flat rates—$33 for the efficiency apartments and $36 for those with one bedroom—and the financial status no longer will be a factor.

Most of the veterans have one or more children. There are only 30 childless couples.

The wives, in their letter to Eppley, presented a budget on which those veteran families receiving only $120 a month must live.

It allows $24 for rent (one bedroom), $4.54 for utilities, $11 for milk, $60 for food, $3 for medicine and drugs, $6.60 for GI insurance, $1 for other insurance, $5 for standing doctors' bills, and $2 for dry cleaning.

This, they pointed out, leaves only $2.86 a month for newspapers, magazines, telephone calls, carfare, clothing and amusement.

They said if they must pay higher rent, the only thing they can do is cut their food bill from $15 to $12 a week and "$12 a week will not feed three persons very well."

Eppley said last night he had not received the petition, but is willing to talk with the wives.

He said the university wants to put the apartments on a self-sustaining basis. Some paying minimum rentals, he declared, own their own automobiles and are from well-to-do families.

He said a committee composed of faculty and staff members recommended the change after an investigation and that the board of regents approved the recommendation.

Faces Hearing

Crain Freed After Check At Gallinger

Harry M. Crain, 51, former English professor and State Department officer, was ordered released yesterday from Gallinger Hospital.

Crain was sent to the hospital for mental observation late last month after police said that he had been found at the Hamilton Hotel suffering from an apparent overdose of sleeping medicine. Police reported that a suicide note was found.

The release was ordered by District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm following an official report that Crain is sane.

Crain faces a hearing today in Municipal Court on a charge that he is a fugitive. It is alleged that he stole $2400 from a students fund while he was a professor of English at the Colorado School of Mines.

He was hired by the State Department on February 20 to teach English in Korea at a $7710 annual salary. Subsequent to that he was arrested and a $1000 bond posted in his behalf. On February 28, he was found unconscious at the hotel.

Free Speech Urged for Reds In Forum Debate

Communists should be given the privilege of free speech because restrictions "would give them the greatest victory they've achieved yet," Rep. Jacob Savits (R., N. Y.), declared last night in a forum debate at Gonzaga High School auditorium.

Savits' opponent, Rep. Dewey Short (R., Mo.), urged that Reds be barred from speaking platforms because their lips "do not reveal their true objectives." He also advocated stricter limitations on public speakers "so that freedom cannot be translated too easily into license."

The debate was one in a series on current topics sponsored by the Washington General Assembly of the Knights of Columbus.

Veterans Seek To Purchase Greenbelt, Md.

U. S.-Owned Community Is Now Undergoing Valuation by PHA

A new all-veteran organization has been organized with the object of purchasing Greenbelt, Government-built-and-owned town in Prince Georges County, it was announced last night.

Sale of the community was authorized by Congress last May, and the Public Housing Authority is now preparing a valuation and conditions of sale under which it will be offered.

The new group, incorporated in the District, is Greenbelt Homes Cooperative Association. As yet, it includes only its officers and incorporators, Robert F. Dove, president, said a membership campaign will begin Saturday. Other officers include Charles L. Redd, vice president; Byron B. Adams, secretary; Robert J. Brady, treasurer, and Harold Hornbeck, director.

Another organization, the Greenbelt Veterans Housing Corp., was formed two years ago to effect purchase of the community. In the past, it listed approximately 1200 of the 1880 families in the community as members.

The new organization notified the city council of Greenbelt last night of its organization and purposes. Along with its public announcement by Dove was included a blast at the present cooperative commercial facilities operated in the community under a contract with the Government and a demand that this be ended and the community be thrown open to other, privately owned enterprises.

Segregation To Be Barred At Pool in Anacostia

To Open in Summer, Capital Parks Official Says; Area Closed After 1949 Disorders

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

The Anacostia swimming pool, closed last summer because of racial disorders, will open this summer on a non-segregated basis, Edward J. Kelly, special assistant to the superintendent of National Capital Parks, said last night.

"We have no authority for refusing any citizen admission to any publicly owned facility," he told the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations meeting in the YMCA, 1700 Good Hope rd. se.

"Very frankly, we think we'll have some disorders, but will be able to control them," Kelly stated. The pool may have to be closed again, he said. "Federal Government can't stand by and let mob rule take over," he added.

In answer to a question, Kelly said it was probable that Negroes were brought to the Anacostia pool last summer by agitators.

"The agitators don't want to swim—they want to start a fight," he declared. "The thing to do is ignore them."

Might Stay Away

Kelly said he believed that these people would stop coming to the pool if they were left alone and no "incidents" developed.

"It's absolutely essential that we have cooperation from civic leaders," he said. "Children don't think clearly. They need guidance by their parents, and school training. They must learn to respect the rights of others."

Voluntary segregation, which existed at the pool before last summer, would return and the problem would be solved if there were adequate swimming facilities in the Southeast area, Kelly went on. The Anacostia pool is the only one in the community.

The Interior Department last year asked funds for another pool at Fort Stanton, Kelly said, but the appropriation was not granted.

He said a large number of Negroes in Anacostia live near Fort Stanton.

A number of council delegates said they had found during last summer's trouble that many of the Negroes trying to enter the pool were not from the Southeast but were from some other section of the city or from out-of-town.

Smith Sees Trouble

Delegate W. J. Smith, chairman of a special committee studying the situation, said he felt "serious trouble will develop" if the pool reopens as planned. Smith's committee was enlarged from four to 12 upon his request.

Asked last night whether Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman had personally approved the proposal to reopen the pool on a nonsegregated basis, A. E. Demaray, assistant director of the National Parks Service, said the plan "has the approval of the Interior Department."

Chapman, former Undersecretary of the Interior, last summer succeeded Julius A. Krug, incumbent Secretary of the Interior.

After a discussion of the school situation, the council voted to protest the proposed transfer of Eliot Junior High School to Negro pupils. Transfer of Eliot has been suggested as an alternative to the transfer of Central.

Authority Plan Proposed

Road Financing for Area Raises Knotty Problems

(Third of a Series)

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

"But where's the money coming from?"

That's the popular refrain as soon as any public official—District, Maryland or Virginia—looks up from any batch of plans for new interstate expressways in the Metropolitan Washington area.

It's clear that the money isn't coming out of a pay-as-you-go tax plan because taxes just aren't going to be shoved up to the astronomical figure which would be necessary to finance a huge short-term program of catching up with needs and projecting ahead a bit.

The only answer is borrowing. But the District has no bonded debt and Congress dislikes letting it have any. Is there, then, no way out?

Pennsylvania Plan

Perhaps the answer can be found in a plan already in effect in Pennsylvania—the State Highway and Bridge Authority set up by the State Legislature last spring to get over the same sort of postwar construction hump there.

The same idea could be used here, not for just a single political division but for the entire metropolitan area or at least for the District and Maryland sector where the needs are the most urgent.

Such an authority could be set up in the form of an interstate pact by the Maryland and/or Virginia Legislatures plus Congress for the District and probably also for the United States in recognition of the special Federal interest here.

How It Works

This is how the Pennsylvania Authority works:

The Authority is a corporation with power to construct, reconstruct, improve, maintain, equip and otherwise operate highways and bridges. Its officials are State officials serving at no extra salary in a dual capacity. In many ways the Authority is nothing more than the State Highway Department wearing another hat.

The Authority is empowered to sell bonds up to 40 million dollars over 30 years at not more than 4 percent interest (actually 15 million dollars have so far been sold at about 1½ percent). The money is used to build the highways and bridges, as approved by the highway department.

What's the key to this arrangement? Just this: the Authority then rents the roads to the State for an annual amount to cover, over a period of years, the cost of the money borrowed, plus overhead. The State thus has only to carry in its annual budget enough to meet an annual charge, not a great 40-million-dollar capital outlay.

Authority Urged

Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, among others, has suggested a National Capital Metropolitan Works Agency patterned after the highly successful Port of New York Authority (which is based on a New York-New Jersey compact).

The former National Capital Park and Planning Commission chairman envisioned such an authority handling bridges, highways, water and sewage.

Such an authority here would need two things, among others—safeguards for each of the political divisions involved and revenue pledges to meet its obligations.

For example, it probably would have to be set up with a provision that it could construct highways (and probably only expressways and only in the metropolitan area) after approval by both the national, District and State planning units and by the State and District highway departments. Perhaps the Maryland and/or Virginia governors and the District Commissioners should be required to give their formal consent.

So many signatures might appear to doom any progress. But this is hardly likely if there were in fact a pot of money available, once agreement were reached, to get the job done.

The District and the States could pledge a specific part of their gasoline tax revenue, for example, to meet the annual charges. In Pennsylvania, the State's credit is not pledged to the authority's bonds but a revenue obligation appears to have satisfied the bond purchasers.

But there is an overriding Federal interest in both the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia. Congress might provide in any such compact that the Federal Government will contribute a specific percentage outside its obligations to the District. It might also permit borrowing from the Federal Treasury at the going interest rate paid by Uncle Sam.

Free Staters Enthusiastic

Maryland planners to whom this reporter talked are enthusiastic about such an authority and they report the Maryland State Roads Commission is keenly aware of its need.

Said Blair Lee 3d, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission:

"The idea might be called radical but this is an emergency situation calling for radical solutions or else our grandchildren will be struggling with the same highway problems we face today."

Said Fred M. Tuemmler, the planning director for the Prince Georges regional office:

"Those of us close to the picture in the development of the suburban area in Maryland realize the problem is too great for local agencies. There is a need for coordinating construction and for providing the necessary funds in time, including additional Federal aid. This could be done through a National Capital Regional Construction Authority."

For Broader Coverage

Tuemmler feels that not only highways and bridges but water, sewer and other such services should be in the province of such an authority.

Officials of the Bureau of Public Roads, who control the highly important Federal aid which now goes to the States and the District, originally suggested the Pennsylvania idea to this reporter. Commissioner Thomas H. MacDonald said it could very well be the way out of the present dilemma. The Pennsylvania Authority is qualifying to receive Federal aid funds.

The point of this interstate compact approach is simply that bold thinking and cooperation could smash the dreary present day construction bottlenecks.

At present the District is allocating around 5 million dollars a year of its 10-million-dollar highway fund to new major projects. The East Capitol Street Bridge, for example, would cost about 10 million dollars. Thus for two years no other big project could be touched under current financing plans.

Maryland is spending over 40 million dollars a year but the two counties in the Metropolitan Washington area must compete with Baltimore and the rest of the State for their share.

Virginia is spending over 50 million dollars a year on its State highway system but that, likewise, includes all the areas other than those parts of the State within the Washington Metropolitan area.

Only by some new scheme, such as a Metropolitan Washington Construction Authority, does it appear possible that this area can lift itself over the hump of accumulated needs for major new expressways. These expressways will speed area citizens to and from their homes and offices quickly, safely and without too much wear and tear on their nerves.

All Quiet on Police Front—For Awhile

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Peace—armed but at least superficially effective—settled over the Metropolitan Police Department last night.

After one week and thousands of words of charges, counter-charges, accusations and denials, no one was talking yesterday.

But feuding principals indicated they still have ammunition, although no one would say when, or if, the battle will be resumed.

In Command at No. 8

Captain Anthony Richitt was in command of the Eighth Precinct.

Captain Beverly C. Beach sunned in Florida, on vacation from command of the Seventh Precinct.

Gambler Emmitt Warring was not available.

They were the principals in last week's fireworks, the direct result of the transfer of Richitt from the Third—or White House—Precinct, allegedly for "failure to carry out his duties" and "disrespect to his superiors."

Richitt followed orders but called a special press conference. He said he was really transferred for telling the House Crime Committee Warring had said he was tipped off by Barrett that the committee was "concerned" about the lack of gambling arrests in the Third and Seventh Precincts.

Friday, a special session of the committee was called to air the controversy.

Richitt repeated his charges under oath. Barrett denied them.

Free Admission

Warring testified it was not Barrett, but Beach, who told him about the committee's concern. Warring freely admitted he had spoken to Beach and Richitt about the gambling situation in their precincts.

Saturday Beach flew in from Miami. He called Warring a "gambler" and what Warring said, "a deliberate lie," and flew back to Miami.

Richitt testified he knowingly whitewashed a gambling report on orders from Inspector John R. Jefferies. Jefferies couldn't recall the incident.

Possibility of trial board discipline of Richitt was up in the air yesterday. Barrett declined to comment. Richitt said he has not been informed of any such discipline.

Beyond Jurisdiction

Meanwhile, committee chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.), indicated the affair Barrett-Richitt is over as far as the committee is concerned. The internal operations of the Police Department are beyond the jurisdiction of the subcommittee, he said except as related to crime and criminal conditions.

Davis said the committee's next concern is a thorough investigation of gambling. He and committee counsel Hyman I. Fischbach are scheduled to appear before the House Accounts Subcommittee to back up their request for $40,000 to continue its investigation. The original $10,000 appropriation is almost expended. Fischbach has been paid $5000 and expenses.

"I thoroughly agree with The Washington Post editorial that the investigation into gambling has not gone far enough. With the right sort of investigation we would be able to explain where Emmitt Warring got his information about the committee and a lot of other things that are not known now," Davis said.

Third Man Arrested In Boldware Holdup

A third man, charged by police with participation in the $6900 robbery on February 25 of Mrs. Blanche Boldware, was held yesterday by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence under $7500 bond for grand jury action.

He was arrested at 1:45 p. m. Sunday while taking a bath.

The defendant was identified as James E. Craig, 31, of no fixed address. He was picked up in a home in the 3400 block of Sherman ave. nw.

Police said he admitted being one of the three armed men who invaded Mrs. Boldware's home at 125 R st. ne., and escaped with $6900 worth of jewelry and $40 in cash.

The jewelry was recovered by police the day after the holdup when they arrested Ernest Price, jr., 24, of 2800 13th st. nw., and Leroy Bundy, 28, 2238 8th st. nw.

Also later arrested and charged with being the "finger man" in the crime was Burnie H. King, 25, of 2213 9th st. nw. He has denied any participation. Mrs. Boldware is the widow of William Howard Taft (Sunshine) Boldware, known as a numbers racket figure here before his death in a traffic crash in 1948.

Ten 4-H Members Visit Truman In Annual Fete

Ten outsanding 4-H members yesterday attended a breakfast given by the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, Inc., and then went on to meet President Truman.

The clubbers were selected by their State leaders to attend the fourth annual breakfast sponsored by the committee. Six of them held a panel discussion at the Congressional Hotel breakfast on the merits of 4-H Club membership.

At the White House, they were greeted by President Truman, who himself had attended one of the annual breakfasts in 1945. Mr. Truman expressed his interest in work of the clubs and accepted from members a paperweight bearing the 4-H emblem.

Classes Open at Sousa as Workmen Finish Their Jobs . . .

MIRACLE OF CONCENTRATION—Pupils in classroom of Mrs. Thelma Olshaker pay strict attention as she introduces herself on first day of new school. Workman putting up window shades gets but very little notice

Lumber Yard Blaze Causes Heavy Damage

A grass and brush fire which ignited a lumber storage shed caused damage estimated at $15,000 to $25,000 yesterday afternoon at the Robinson Bros. Inc., Lumber Co., 1239 Kenilworth ave. ne.

Firemen received the first call at 4 p. m., but when the first company arrived it immediately summoned more help. A total of 13 pieces of apparatus responded.

A company official said the shed was filled with plywood, and with millwork such as doors, door frames and window frames. He made the loss estimate. He said that once some resinous wood started to burn, encouraged by wind, the fire was difficult to extinguish.

Including that blaze, District firemen received seven calls yesterday for grass and brush fires.

497 Pupils Open Sousa School With Minimum of Difficulties

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Four hundred and ninety-seven teenagers yesterday went through a new kind of opening day of school.

It wasn't the first day of school for any of them—but it was the first day of school for Sousa Junior High School, and the smell of newness was still in the building.

Workmen were still fastening window shades in place. There was the smell of fresh plaster. The long rows of green lockers in the tiled halls of the building were not yet scratched or initialed or otherwise documented.

For the transferees, who came from Eliot and Kramer schools, the thing they noticed first was the big windows—and the view, which on one side of the building includes the roling green of a golf course.

Quick to Take Over

The students were quick to associate themselves with the new school.

"Where's my locker?" a girl anxiously asked. "Which one is my seat?"

With the nonchalance of teenagers, the students expressed neither awe nor exceeding thankfulness at their new daytime home.

"I really didn't think about it before I came," said Lawrence Hanson, 13, of 110 34th st. se. For most, Sousa's location, however, meant less travel time to school, meant the difference between a ride on streetcar and bus and walking a comfortably few blocks from home.

They were glad to try out their new lockers, each with its own combination. Most of them had been sharing lockers with others at their former schools.

Minimum of Confusion

Miss Eleanor P. McAuliffe, principal, thought the first day was got through with a minimum of confusion. The students did not all arrive at once, for one thing, and the ordeal of getting them through their first indoctrination—a tour of the building, a run-through of classes, getting used to new home rooms, etc.,—came off better than anyone had dared hope.

There were some turmoils—two little lost boys, almost tearful, stopped Miss McAuliffe in the hall because, despite their schedules in hand, they didn't know where they were supposed to go.

Sousa's first-day enrollment was just about as expected. A total of 500 students is anticipated for this term. Next September, when the new term starts, enrollment probably will go up about 250 more, Miss McAuliffe said. Reason for the jump is that Sousa now has no graduating ninth-grade class; but will have both that and an influx of new seventh-graders for the 1951-52 term.

Council Plans Coin Machine Ban to Minors

The Bladensburg Town Council last night took initial steps toward enacting an ordinance that would prohibit minors from using coin-operated amusement devices.

The action came after requests from citizens in the area for such a law.

George G. McLeish, a member of the House of Delegates and town counsel, prepared the ordinance. He said it would prohibit maintenance of more than five coin machines in one establishment, penalize operators who allowed minors to play such machines, and penalize minors caught playing the machines.

McLeish said he did not fear the machines themselves as gambling devices, but that minors might gamble on the scores made on the machines.

Final action on the measure will be taken at the next council meeting on April 3.

Takoma Man Fined $100 in Traffic Case

Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie warned yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court he will deal sternly with motorists who commit traffic offenses near schools.

He imposed a fine of $100 on Edmond J. Ruth, 42, of 6800 Red Top rd., Takoma Park, Md., after Ruth pleaded guilty to reckless driving.

On January 5, Ruth's car struck Frederick C. Cooper, 11, of 2013 Sheridan st., Green Manor, in front of the Agar rd. elementary school where the boy was serving as a school traffic patrolman.

The boy was not seriously injured. Ruth testified he swerved his car to avoid hitting a slow-moving vehicle and struck the boy.

Funeral services for Mrs. Roy K. Phillips, 63, a resident of Hyattsville for 40 years, wil lbe held at 2 p.m. today in the Gasch funeral home, Hyattsville. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Phillips was born and educated in Petersburg, Va., and was a member of the Rebekah Lodge and the Ruth Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, in Hyattsville.

She is survived by a daughter, Miss Thelma E. Anglin; two sons, Morris E. and William H. Anglin, and an adopted son, Thomas C. Anglin, all of Hyattsville. Also surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Mamie M. Davis, 2115 Pennsylvania ave. nw., and Mrs. Grace M. Burton, Birmingham, Ala.

Albert Lebrun, Ex-President Of France, Dies

Paris, March 6 (AP).—Albert Lebrun, last President of France's prewar Third Republic, died today of pneumonia. The former President, who had been ill for a month, was 78.

M. Lebrun

Lebrun was deposed in July, 1940, after France's defeat by Germany. His powers were taken over by Marshal Philippe Petain, who became chief of state at Vichy during the German occupation.

After spending part of the occupation period in retirement in the French Alps, Lebrun was arrested by the Gestapo in August, 1943, and deported to Bavaria. He was sent back to France two months later, however, because of ill health.

After liberation, he avoided politics during the formation of the Fourth Republic.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, French leader in the liberation, absolved Lebrun of blame in France's downfall.

Born of poor farming folk on August 29, 1871, Lebrun was a shy, modest man of moderate political leanings. He was elected in 1932 to the presidency, a post which had no real executive powers. He succeeded Paul Doumer, who was assassinated.

Prior to his election, Lebrun held numerous cabinet posts, following membership in the Chamber of Deputies from 1900 to 1919 and in the Senate from 1920 to 1932. He was an artillery major in the First World War and fought at Verdun.

At his bedside in his Paris home when he died were his son, Jean, and his daughter, Mme. Pierre Freysse-Linard.

He was known as "Doktor Lew" the comedian.

His last real public performance, besides benefits in New Canaan, was in the radio program, "Stop Me if You've Heard This One," in 1947.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Couple's Penniless Marriage Produced a Child Almost Immediately, Upsetting Five-Year Plan For Savings; Wife Is Unhappy, Man Is Worried

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young veteran, married nearly two years. My wife and I were penniless when we married, and we planned to save money for about five years before having children. But as luck would have it, we had a child the first year and Inga had to quit her job, naturally. Since then she has been unbearable.

I must admit that Inga was spoiled by her family. She is used to getting everything she desires. And when she can't get these things she quarrels with me, complaining that I don't make enough money, etc.

I try to comfort her by reminding her of other people who aren't even as fortunate as we, but it doesn't help. She also complains because I never want to visit her family. But every time we visit there, she and her sister quarrel so sharply that one of them is always in tears. And her little brother is so spoiled and unruly that I just can't stand being around them.

He Opposes Wife's Wish to Wage-Earn

RECENTLY Inga mentioned that if we got a baby sitter she could go back to work. Naturally I didn't like the idea, due to the fact that no one can give a child the care that a mother can. So I objected, and many heated arguments followed. I threatened several times to leave her, although I wouldn't.

I point out that by budgeting ourselves we can still get ahead, although it will take time. But Inga is the type who hates to stay home and she can't see my idea. So I am at my wits' end. What can you do with a person like that? S. K.

Wife Was Fleeing Hairshirt Family

DEAR S. K.: The situation isn't good. Inga isn't ready for wifehood and motherhood. She wanted a license to live with you, with society's blessing, so as to enjoy unrestrained lovemaking and to feel the importance of being "missus."

She wanted to play house, and also she itched to get away from her hairshirt family, in a new arrangement where an interested party would take responsibility for looking after her.

In short, she is childish at best and infantile at worst, and I believe the same may be said of you with equal truth. Hence both of you need help in growing up psychologically, to pass the new tests you've brought on yourselves.

In general, married pairs don't start out knowing how to get on well together, how to give their progeny worthwhile care, how to solve financial problems a day at a time. These are routine steps-in-growth that a married couple must take together, if they are to succeed in staying together and increasing their happiness over the years.

Don't Talk Tough; Rather, Accommodate

YOU FEEL at a dead-end with Inga largely because of your all-or-nothing attitude towards your own ideas. If she won't accept your dictates, you are "through,"—that's your sales talk, which is tyranny, not attempted partnership. The key to success in family relations is willingness to table one's own pet theories and try the other person's suggestions.

It is a mistake to think, as you do, that "no one can give a child the care that a mother can." A good mother is God's gift to babies, yes. But better a warmhearted housekeeper-nurse in charge, than a mother who feels martyred by baby-care. And perhaps you can find such a person to step into Inga's shoes on the home front, if she burns to go back to wage-earning. But don't put your trust in a "baby sitter." Get a competent, well recommended domestic worker who likes children and then do your teamwork best to keep her happy in the job. M. H.

Scot's Concert In Embassy For Memorial

The British Ambassador and Lady Franks will open the embassy on March 24 for an evening of music by Nemone Balfour, the proceeds to go to the War Memorial and Thanksgiving Fund committee of Scotland. Miss Balfour will sing songs of her native Scotland, accompanying herself on the old instrument of the day.

The recently organized Scottish-American branch of the War Memorial and Thanksgiving Fund has among its members Lady Berendsen, wife of the New Zealand Ambassador; Mrs. John W. Taylor, a Highlander from Sutherlanshire, wife of the British Minister; Mrs. Ralph Flanders, wife of the Senator from Vermont; Mrs. Guy Campbell, descended from the MacGregors and the MacLeans; Mrs. Edward Davis 3d, wife of the Director of the new Naval Museum established in a section of Decatur House; A. J. Montgomery, from the Hebrides Island of Lewis, who is chairman of the Board of AAA.

The Scottish-American branch will aid the parent organization through the benefit concert. Rather than establish a useless war memorial for the men and women of the remote regions of the Scottish highlands and Islands who lost their lives in World War II, the organization will provide a living memorial for the children of these people. They hope to give them recreational and sports facilities as well as equipment for their training in arts and crafts, language study, music, summer camps and schools.

Easy Clothes for Busy People

Quick-Change Fashions Dominate 1950

By Peggy Preston

FASHION, despite what its critics have to say about it, has a habit of recording the spirit of the times. In the hemlines, waistlines, fabrics and general styling is reflected the manner of life in a given decade or decades.

Today, for instance, casual, quick-change fashions dominate the clothing picture. This is in answer to the demands of an active, busy feminine population that moves rapidly from home to office, to club meeting and to "dinner out."

These easy-to-live-in clothes fill the needs of the woman with little or no time on her hands—the woman who typifies the spirit of her sex in 1950. Homemaker or job-holder, frequently both, she is asking for the kind of streamlined clothes that will see her through every phase of her varied, active life.

Lloyd Weill, New York dress manufacturer, recently pointed out this trend in a speech before the National Retail Dry Goods Association in New York. According to Mr. Weill:

"I believe that those at all familiar with the influences of a mode of living upon the needs and tastes in clothes will concede that the most fundamental and far-reaching trend in decades has been that which has brought casual clothes into the forefront of the American apparel picture.

CASUAL CLASSICS—The time-honored shirtwaist dress finds great favor in 1950 when treated as a "separates" outfit like the costumes pictured at the right. Two sets of blouses and pleated skirts point up the value of the mix-match idea. The items, in solid or printed patterns, are interchangeable, insuring wardrobe variety. Fabrics in these Lotte designs are lightweight wool challis. One set comes in solid beige yellow; the other in blue or red print against the same neutral background. Solid colored blouse and skirt may be worn together, or matched with printed items as shown here. Available at Konrad's on F st.

Mr. Weill credits American women alone with creating this type of clothing that is expressive of the quick tempo of their lives.

"The inspiration for the casual styles was not found in the manner of life of the European woman, or even in those of England," he pointed out. As we all know, the European apparel artists have traditionally designed for the woman to whom being chic was full-time employment. No meeting of the League of Women Voters for her, or no broiling steaks on the outdoor fireplace. The American woman, on the other hand, has no aversion to being beautiful but she gets intolerably bored sitting around all day doing nothing."

New Shop

In Washington, the growing importance of casual clothes has been pointed up recently by the opening of a shop devoted exclusively to this type of apparel. Situated on F st. near the Willard Hotel, it is named Konrad's. It's racks are filled with colorful, simple clothing designed for every hour of the day. Cottons from California, prints and novelty fabrics from the New York showrooms of designer Tina Leser; bathing suits, co-ordinated sports ensembles, sweaters, and bright woolens for town and country. These are but a few of the items being offered in this up-to-the-minute establishment.

Further evidence of local interest in this type of fashions, was the opening last week of a Junior Sportswear Shop at Lansburgh's.

In this small, but thriving shop within a shop, the woman who needs a junior size (9 to 15) can find casual sportswear that is styled for an adult figure. Majority of the outfits follow the "separates" idea, blouses and skirts in pure silk prints, cotton cords, picolay, etc. Well styled bathing suits in junior sizes will be available there soon, a boon to women who cannot wear misses sizes, yet want a certain amount of sophistication in sportswear.

MAJ. GEN. U. S. GRANT 3d watches as charter for the Washington Chapter of the American Business Women's Association is presented to Miss Helen Snelling, president, by Miss Dorothy MacPhee, regional director

Only the Great Can Overcome Petty Irritations, Grant Says

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, vice president of George Washington University, last night counseled the members of the newly formed Washington Chapter of the American Business Women's Association not to let "the little frustrations and interferences of everyday deaden or depreciate your beliet in what you are doing."

He told the group that he himself takes refuge in the doggerel:

"The cow is in the parlor,
The cat is in the lake,
The Baby's in the garbage pail,
What difference does it make?"

General Grant further quoted, this time from Benjamin Franklin, the theory that most people will meet a challenge with great courage and adequacy, but only the truly great can overcome the irritations of every day.

The talk on principles of success in business was given at the initial meeting of the Washington chapter, held at the Spanish Club.

Doing Best You Can

The general also spoke about the importance of taking up any task assigned and doing the best one can with it. It is an essential lesson taught at military and naval academies the general said, and "it saves much energy and mental suffering if no time is wasted on worry on whether we can do it or not." He cited his grandfather's readiness to meet great responsibilities and make audcious decisions, which the late President explained by saying that if he failed after doing his best, those who had selected him to do it were the ones who had made the mistake.

Officers Installed

Official ceremonies were conducted by the Regional director, Mrs. Dorothy MacPhee, who installed the temporary officers: Miss Helen Snelling, Washington Representative of the Braniff International Airways, president; Miss Evelyn Moss, staff assistant at General Motors Corporation, vice president; Miss Peggie Caton, office manager at Dwight, Royall, Harris, Koegle and Caskey, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Hayden, administrative assistant at Civil Aeronautics Administration, recording secretary; Miss Harriet Gray, clerk of Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, treasurer. Permanent officers will be elected at the end of a 90-day period.

There are 60 charter members of the Washington Chapter. A second chapter is now being formed. Further information on it may be obtained from the Regional Offices at the Willard Hotel.

Koo Says U. S. 'Modest Outlay' Can Save China

The Chinese Ambassador Dr. Wellington Koo yesterday declared that only a "very modest outlay" on the part of the United States would have saved China from communism.

In an address before the University Women's Club the Ambassador described a "rising tide of resistance" against communism in at least half a dozen provinces held by the Communists.

In view of this "increasing revulsion" the Ambassador stated the Nationalist regime needs only a small amount of money, plus military aid, to turn the tide.

The military aid Dr. Koo has in mind would be "mostly technical assistance." "The manpower is there."

The Ambassador stated that he had received reports of unrest among politicians, military men, industrialists, laborers and farmers within Communist-dominated provinces.

But in the agrarian classes, he continued the revolution is strongest. He used as illustration a recent incident where farmers from two adjacent villages rose against the Communist army and killed 300 soldiers, and then fled to the mountains to organize guerilla units.

"People are finding out they have been cheated by communism," Dr. Koo said.

And with more assistance from this country, communism can be stopped in China, thereby saving Asia, he concluded.

ANNE

Holes in Cotton Clothes Weren't Worn There, Reader Complains. Anne Suspects Silver Fish, Drat 'Em!

DEAR ANNE:
Are there any household insects which eat cotton? We have found small round holes in some 100 percent cotton garments, which cannot be due to wear.
L. H.

DEAR L. H.:
Could be that silverfish nibbled these holes in your cotton clothes. These little pests are quite fond of starch and sizing, as well as paper. Have you seen any of them about your house?

Sodium fluoride will help you get rid of the rascals, but be careful in using it if there are children or pet animals in the house as it's a poison. In using it, mix with 8 or 10 times as much flour, add enough water to make a paste, and place dabs of this on paper. Roll into tubes and place behind books and other places where the silver fish are likely to reach them.

DDT is also effective against silverfish. Spray 5 percent DDT oil solution around all places in the living room where silverfish may hide during day or where they may crawl when they come out at night in search of food.

DEAR ANNE:
Will you please reprint the address of a shop in Washington which carries a preparation for synthetic blackboard? My son has a desk which is fine except the black finish has worn off. Maybe I could order same. I called several shops in my town and no one carries it.
Mrs. James Strait, Hagerstown, Md.

DEAR MRS. STRAIT:
The preparation you want is called blackboard slating, and it can be purchased in Washington from a firm at 710 13th st. nw. (National 6386). You can buy this product in quantities as small as half a pint, and if the blackboard surface of your son's desk is not large, that may be all you'll need to order. The half-pint can sells for 50 cents; the pint, for 85 cents.

DEAR ANNE:
Indeed there is an organized square dance group in Silver Spring, and a very good one, too! Our group, which is a part of the Community Arts Cooperative of Silver Spring, Bethesda and Chevy Chase, meets every second and fourth Thursday evening of the month at the Rock Creek Cabin off East-West hwy. We dance from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. in this log cabin setting, and our caller, Albert McPherson, keeps us swinging and do-si-doing with verve and enthusiasm. The Community Arts Cooperative was started two years ago by a group of mothers who felt the need of recreational activities for both adults and children in this area.
Mrs. W. H. Avery,
724 Guilford ct., Silver Spring, Md.

Another reader forwards a copy of the monthly News Letter of the Community Arts Cooperative, which mentions several openings for new members in the Square Dance Group. Dues are $1.50 per couple per evening, payable in advance installments of $6 per two-months. Reservations should be made through Mrs. Avery (above), the News Letter advises.

DEAR ANNE:
Not too long ago you published the address or telephone number of a concern here in town that repairs and repaints baby strollers. Could you give me this information, please? I've also read in your column of a preparation that can be applied over varnish to produce a satin finish and reduce the gloss of the varnish. Could you give me the name of this or what to ask for in the stores? Mrs. Norman G. Lowe, 119 D st. se.

Dear Mrs. Lowe:
The firm which paints and repairs baby strollers (and other children's wheel goods) is located at 2461 18th st., Hudson 8289.

To reduce the high gloss on varnish, you should apply a second coat of dull-finish varnish. Various paint manufacturers apply other names to this product, such as satin varnish, or semi-gloss, but all follow about the same formula and serve the same purpose. You should have no trouble buying the product under any of these names.

POTTERY highball beakers with family crests are the specialty of Miss Catherine Arms Graves, young potter who makes ash trays, cigarette boxes and plates, too. You tell her the colors you want—50 choices—and the monogram or crest you'd like and she'll make 'em and bake 'em to your order. Nice for wedding presents, she thinks, because you can order the items and let the bride choose her own colors. Miss Graves has her ceramics on exhibit at Ann's Kitchen, caterer's shop which recently moved into a new location at 1504 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Clean and cut in small pieces about two inches in length, one and one-half pounds fish (such as haddock, snapper, bass or flounder). Cook one large sliced onion, one sliced leek and two cloves crushed garlic in one-half cup salad oil about 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Add fish, two chopped tomatoes, one bay leaf, pinch of saffron, two teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon black pepper and one quart boiling water and bring to a boil. Cover and simmer about 20 minutes. Cut one cooked lobster or crab in shell in pieces and add. Wash six clams in shell and add to pot. (The cooking will open then). Stir in one-half glass white wine and cook five to 10 minutes longer or until well heated. Arrange fish in hot soup tureen or bowl; add six slices French bread that has been fried in two tablespoons butter or shortening until crisp. Pour unstrained soup over all. Sprinkle with parsley. Approximate yield: six portions.

Hamilton, Annapolis Hotels Sold

Sale of two more Washington hotels owned by the Tishman Realty & Construction Co. of New York was announced last night.

Latest transfers are of the Annapolis Hotel, at 11th and H sts. nw., and the Hamilton Hotel, at 14th and K sts. nw.

Late last month, Tishman announced it had sold its Hotel Sheraton, 15th and L sts. nw., to the Pick Hotel Corp.

Norman Tishman, president of the realty firm, said it was part of a program of his company to divest itself of this type of property and concentrate on commercial and residential fields.

Purchaser of the Annapolis and Hamilton properties is the Manger Hotel Corp. of New York. Officials of that firm said last night they contemplated no additional hotel purchases in Washington.

No details of the sale of either hostelry have been made public.

One Too Many Emerson Sts. Is Confusing

Two 1300 blocks of Emerson street, 4 miles apart, are confusing to the Postoffice and department store delivery men but not to residents who live along one of the identically named streets.

Twenty residents of the "short Emerson street" yesterday appeared at a District Building hearing to protest changing the name of their street to "E place."

They said the proposed name would make it sound as though they live in a slum. They said they liked the street named as it is.

The "short Emerson street" is one block long and bisects the square bounded by 13th, 14th, E and F sts. ne. It was named Emerson street in 1892.

The other 1300 block of Emerson st. is out in the third alphabet and is one block in a street that with a few interruptions stretches from Rock Creek Park to the District line. It acquired its name 14 years after the other block.

Three Indicted On Charges Of Murder

Three men were indicted on murder charges by the District grand jury yesterday.

William W. Harley, 31, of 4908 Benning rd. se., was indicted for the first degree murder of Richard Thomas Jackson, 28, of 4920 Benning rd. se. Jackson was killed by a shotgun during an argument in Harley's home February 10.

Indicted on charges of second degree murder were Johnnie Daye, 23, of 1109 1st st. nw., and Robert Carter, 24, of 1449 U st. nw. Daye is accused of shooting Bernice Arrington, 24, of 3218 13th st. nw., to death with a pistol February 11 during an argument over a locked door at the 1st st. address. Carter is accused of fatally stabbing Mrs. Jessie M. Martin, 33, of 1623 Marion st. nw., at her home February 14. He was also indicted on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon in connection with the stabbing of her husband, Walter Martin, at the same time.

Moses D. Williams, 41, of 1533 Marion st. nw., was charged with arson for setting fire to a room he was occupying at 2034 1st st. nw. January 31.

Joseph M. Brockwell, 53, of 3822 Livingston st. nw., was indicted for forging and passing eight bad checks, totaling $434. Police said he passed the checks at various grocery stores around town on September 26.

Indicted on a charge of larceny after trust of $1000 was Vanders Baccus, 29, of 634 S st. nw., manager of the Washington office of the Fuller Products Co. Miss Phennie M. Lance of 213 Morgan st. nw., an employe of the company, told police she gave the money to Baccus in small amounts between July, 1948, and April, 1949, to invest it in the company, which he failed to do.

George Carroll, 65, of 1544 Marion st. nw., and George F. Waters, 54, of 209 Morgan st. nw., were indicted on charges of operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

Law Banning Birth Control Data Assailed

Planned Parenthood's fight for the privilege of distributing birth control information in Massachusetts was described yesterday as "part of the basic fight for democratic civil rights."

Massachusetts law specifically bans distribution of contraceptive information, Mrs. Walter E. Campbell, a member of the board of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, told members of the Washington association yesterday.

Clinics which operated briefly in the State were raided and closed 13 years ago, she said at the association's annual meeting at Barker Hall, 17th and K sts. nw.

Jewish Center Moves Into New Montgomery Unit

The Montgomery County Jewish Community, Inc., yesterday moved into its new $200,000 center on East-West hwy. at Meadowbrook lane, Chevy Chase.

Only the first of the three units is completed now, Myer Freyman, community president, said.

Dedication ceremonies will be held in the near future, Freyman said, when the center will be opened.

Terror of Modern Weapons No Bar to War—Oppenheimer

Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer with first-prize winner Saul Herbert Sternberg (center) and second-prize winner Donald Bruce McCormick (left)

It's "dishonest" to say—though not to hope—that "the very terror of modern weapons would in itself put an end to war," Nuclear Physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer told winners of the Science Talent Search last night at the Statler Hotel.

It's "dishonest" even to say that the abolition of war is "the final, absolute objective of all political decision." Freedom, decency, and the fundamental morality of right house Electric Corporation, was and wrong, said Dr. Oppenheimer, can't be tossed aside for any single end.

Now director of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N. J., Dr. Oppenheimer asserted that political science should adopt as basic general science's tenet of "freedom of inquiry."

"There is no place for dogma in science," he said. "The scientist is free to ask any question, to doubt any assertion, to seek for any evidence, to correct any error.

Dangers of Secrecy

"We know that the wages of secrecy are corruption. We know that in secrecy, error—undetected—will flourish and subvert."

While we "need to remember that war today has become and is becoming increasingly different," Dr. Oppenheimer said, we should not forget "all the lessons which history or past wisdom can teach us. . . ."

Contest winners were announced by Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory and president of Science Service which conducts the contest through Science Clubs of America. Watson Davis, director of Science Service, presided over the banquet. A. C. Monteith, chairman of the Westinghouse Educational Foundation and vice president of Westinghouse Electric, also spoke.

Bronx Boy at Top

Grand winner of the science contest, sponsored by Westinghouse Electric Corp., was announced at the dinner as 16-year-old Saul Herbert Sternberg, of the Bronx, New York. Chosen from the 40 contest finalists, young Sternberg's experiments included the measurements of tracks made by helium atoms across a photographic plate. He receives a $2800 scholarship.

Second prize winner—of a $2000 scholarship—was Donald Bruce McCormick, 17, of Oak Ridge, Tenn. His experiments were concerned with abnormal growths on goldenrod plants. Donald's father is an Atomic Energy Commission chemist. The youngster hopes to become a biochemist.

Eight winners of $400 scholarships were:

Malcom S. Gordon, 16, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Robert W. Detenbeck, 17, of Kenmore, N. Y.; William D. Gunter, jr., 18, of Bellingham, Wash.; Dennis P. Malone, 17, also of Kenmore, N. Y.; William J. Reeves, jr., 17, of Springfield, Oreg.; William G. Tifft, 17, of Seymour, Conn., and Cynthia W. Wyeth, 16, of North Hills (Philadelphia), Pa.

The 30 other finalists each were awarded $100 scholarships. None was from the Washington area.

However, Miles Davis, of 1422 Rhode Island ave. nw., son of the Science Service director, placed "as high" on contest examinations as any of the 40 finalists.

He was disqualified because of his father's connection with the Science Talent Search. Young Davis, a Central High School student, attended the dinner.

J. P. McGovern

Chevy Chase M.D. Assigned $25,000 Grant

A $5000-a-year grant for five years was awarded yesterday to the George Washington University School of Medicine for Dr. John Phillip McGovern.

Dr. McGovern

It was one of 20 such grants of $25,000 each announced by the John and Mary R. Markle Foundation of New York.

Stated purpose of the grants is "for support of outstanding young scientists who have chosen academic medicine in preference to practice or research in industrial laboratories. The purpose is to afford them academic and financial security to develop at their own pace."

Dr. McGovern, 28, is at present chief resident at Children's Hospital. On July 1, he will join the staff of the George Washington University School of Medicine to teach and continue his research.

Dr. McGovern is a native of the District and lives at 7421 Lynnhurst st., Chevy Chase, Md. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Francis X. McGovern of Washington.

McNeil to Address Red Cross Luncheon

W. J. McNeil, assistant secretary and comptroller of the Department of Defense, will be the principal speaker at the second general report luncheon meeting of the Red Cross fund campaign at 12:30 p. m. today. The meeting will be at the United States Chamber of Commerce building, Connecticut ave. and H st. nw.

The goal for the Washington area in the campaign is $1,039,000 and at a meeting last Friday, $79,504.79 in subscriptions were reported.

Hospital Talk Listed

Maj. M. B. Winstead, of the outpatient service of the Army Walter Reed Medical Center, will address a meeting of the District of Columbia Dietetic Association tonight at 8 at George Washington University Hospital. He will discuss effective ways of teaching dietary treatment to hospital out-patients.

THE AUTOMOBILE is strangling real estate values in one section and at the same time the strangling process increases values in another. The old shopping centers have "no parking" signs posted everywhere. Woodward & Lothrop have opened a tremendous shopping center in Maryland with parking facilities unlimited. We have 500 acres located about four squares over the District line in Maryland in the zone of the new South Capitol Street Bridge. This bridge was opened for traffic January 14 with capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. The Hot Shoppe Restaurant was first to buy a drive-in parking center right near us. Other big interests are making inquiries. Price $3000 an acre as an outstrip. One hundred acres are already sold. Stop your automobile at the District line and look to the right and to the left, you'll see a $100,000,000 in apartments and houses building up to us and around us. Virginia Poll Tax Study Recommitted

Richmond, Va., March 6 (AP).—The Virginia House of Delegates today refused to accept a proposal for a two-year study of measures to repeal the State poll tax.

Instead, the House returned to the committee on privileges and elections its proposal for the repeal study, and asked that the committee recommend "something more specific" before the close of the current legislative session.

Three Proposals Studied

The committee, deliberating three separate proposals to eliminate the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting, had suggested an investigation of the proposals as an alternate to immediate action on repeal. Specifically, it called for a two-year study by the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council.

Motion to recommit the measure to the committee was made by Delegate W. R. Broaddus, who said advocates of the several proposed types of poll tax repeal had agreed on the procedure.

Budget Bill Top Item

While the House was seeking to salvage something out of the numerous poll tax repeal propositions, the Senate was eyeing as a far bigger job, disposition this week of the 599 milliondollar budget bill which is in the hands of a six-member subcommittee of Senate finance.

The one-million-dollar item, put in on the House floor largely through the efforts of a bloc led by Delegate Robert Whitehead of Nelson, was regarded as the No. 1 candidate for Senate whittling. This addition put the budget some $600,000 in the red in the view of the administration.

Both houses moved through their calendars rapidly today before taking on heavy committee tasks. The Senate passed without opposition the House bill permitting local school boards to lease space in school buildings or school grounds as long as there is no interference with the education program.

Debate By-Passed

The House by-passed what might have developed into a debate by putting over until Tuesday consideration of the Gray Tax Study Commission bill calling for local reassessments of land values every six years.

These other bills by the Gray Study Commission were passed by the House and sent on to the Governor:

To authorize the appointment of an executive assistant to the Governor to promote reorganization and economy. Establish a State commission on local debt to aid localities in bond borrowing. Permit the auditor of public accounts to prescribe uniform accounting and bookkeeping forms for various State agencies.

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS, who next year becomes full conductor of the New York Philharmonic, had high praise yesterday for the National Symphony Orchestra, which he will conduct Wednesday evening. Particularly impressed by the response and training of the musicians, Mitropoulos gave credit to Washington and its interest in culture for supporting "such a fine" organization

Europe Show Planned by Md. Dairy Team

Maryland's 4-H dairy cattle judging team has been invited to compete in the Royal Show at Oxford, England, this summer, Dr. T. B. Symons, dean of the University of Maryland Farm Extension Service, announced last night.

Winners in the Royal Show are considered world champions. The Maryland team won the right to represent the United States by placing first in the team judging contest in the Dairy Cattle Congress last October in Waterloo, Iowa.

However, Stanley Stiles, 22, of Rockville, who won top honors for the Maryland team at Waterloo, will not make the trip. He is over the age limit.

Members of the four-man team who will make the trip, if methods for financing the jaunt can be arranged, are: Donald Pickering, 19, of McDonough; David Ifert, 21, Middleton; Royd Smith, 17, Frederick, and Lambert Davis, Cecilton.

Annexation Plan Put at $1.6 Million

Annexation of 7½ square miles of Fairfax County will cost Alexandria "in the neighborhood of $1,600,000," the city annexation committee disclosed yesterday.

"Rather than impose a financial burden on the city, as most annexation cases do, it is an economically sound step for Alexandria to take at this time," the committee added.

Alexandria has announced its intent to take a 7½-square-mile bite westward out of Fairfax land that will more than double its present size. The County Board of Supervisors has pledged a stern court fight.

The annexation committee, through City Councilman Albert A. Smoot, chairman, termed its financial estimates "ultra conservative." It said the annexed area would return about $600,000 in annual revenue. Annual cost to Alexandria for services will be about $475,000, the committee estimated.

The $1,600,000 should pay for the two schools in the territory, building of new schools and additions, and transportation of pupils. It also covers cost of a new fire station and hydrants.

Likewise, it would handle additional expenses to enlarge the proposed sewage treatment plant, the committee said. The city could pay for this through revenue bonds.

En Route to Bank

Messenger Robbed of $2826 3 Blocks From Police Seation

A store clerk who was walking to a bank to deposit more than $4000 in cash and checks was held up and robbed yesterday, three blocks from the Twelfth Precinct Police station, he told police.

John T. Reed, 19, of 5037 55th ave., Rogers Heights, Md., left the Western Auto store at 18th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne., where he works, at 11:10 a. m. with $2826.65 in cash and $1409.95 in checks, the store's Friday and Saturday receipts.

At 20th st. and Rhode Island ave., only half a block from the Woodridge branch of the Hamilton National Bank where he was to make the deposit, a man suddenly bumped into him and produced a small automatic, Reed said.

The man told him to "turn around and keep walking" and guided him from behind into 20th st., south two blocks, and then left into Hamlin st., according to Reed. Grabbing the money, the bandit warned him not to look around and escaped, the clerk said.

Reed said he noticed a 1941 Dodge sedan and a 1948 Cadillac near the scene, and described the bandit as in his 30s, 5 feet 2 and dark-complexioned.

Man Killed When Timber Falls on Him

Jack Jones, 41, of 234 Oakwood st. se., an electrician, was killed instantly yesterday by a falling timber at the new Berkshire Apartment Building, 4201 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Police investigating the case said he was struck on the head by a 2-by-6 inch plank 10 to 12 feet long. They said they believe it fell from the seventh or eighth story. They could find no workmen who knew how the accident occurred.

Associates said Jones had started to walk toward the building and was about 25 feet from the entrance when he was struck.

Fellow workers said Jones was employed by the Brisker Electric Co., contractors, of 4001 38th st., Brentwood, Md.

Jones was a native of Lynchburg, Va., and belonged to the Electricians Union local there, relatives said. However, he had been a resident of the District for 30 years, and attended McKinley High School here. He is survived by his wife, June; a son, Charles B., of Washington, and another son, Robert W. Jones, with the Coast and Geodetic Survey at New Orleans, and his mother, Mrs. W. M. Mackie, now in Florida.

State Welfare Cuts Hit by County Aide

The effect of the $960,000 cut in the State welfare appropriation will be twofold in Montgomery County, William E. Royer, county welfare director, declared yesterday.

Royer was interviewed on the welfare situation on Station WGAY by Mrs. James V. Bennett and Mrs. Thomas Lee Smith, president and health and welfare chairman of the County League of Women Voters.

The cutback from $8,318,000 to $7,558,000 in State funds will mean, Royer said, that aid applicants now on waiting lists will have to remain there until others cease receiving aid, and that monthly cuts of from $8 to $17 in grants will have to be made "across the board." There are 13 applicants now on the waiting list.

Taking a hypothetical case of a woman with four children and a hospitalized husband, Royer said she would be eligible for a budget of $127 monthly, but could receive only $114 after the necessary cuts. He also emphasized that the budget allotments are now 15 percent below what is considered desirable for decency and health.

Arlington Virus Labeled Flu

The virus that laid low so many children at the Woodmont Elementary School in Arlington has been definitely identified by United States Public Health Service scientists as a Type A influenza "bug."

The doctors said yesterday they were not certain that the Type A virus found at Woodmont was the same as that prevalent among students and workers in other parts of the Washington area.

The Woodmont school was closed for three days, beginning February 20,

Dr. Robert J. Huebner, chief of the USPHS section on virus and rickettsial diseases, and Dr. Bernice Eddy, chief of the section on influenze virus, announced their findings yesterday. They came from cultures taken from throats of Woodmont students.

Dr. Huebner and Dr. Eddy said the virus they found is closely related to a type discovered at Fort Monmouth, N. J., in 1947, and the most prevalent in the country since.

The Friends I Had

I used to have some special friends . . . I do not have today . . . And many times I wonder why . . . We had to drift away . . . I know I left the neighborhood . . . As some of them did too . . . But that is not a real excuse . . . For friendship to be through . . . I wrote them letters now and then . . . And some of them replied . . . Yet gradually and casually . . . The correspondence died . . . Perhaps it is the way of life . . . That changes everything . . . And what is past is only ours . . . To be remembering . . . But every time I think of them . . . And hold them in my heart . . . I wonder why they do not write . . . And why we had to part.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

This Pace Is Terrific, But Law Is Law

Director of the Budget Frank C. Pace, jr., will address the National Press Club Thursday on the subject: "Why There Is a Deficit in the Federal Budget."

I have had only a few opportunities to judge Mr. Pace's work with numbers, but have been favorably impressed with what I've seen.

On a golf course, he seldom has occasion to count any higher than 75. Unfortunately, his work with the budget runs him into totals which are some 40 billions higher.

If Mr. Pace has trouble explaining the reason for the deficit, perhaps he can fall back on Gold's Law, a principle I first discovered while helping Sir Isaac with his study of gravity.

With "I" standing for income, "E" for expenditures, "S" for surplus and "D" for deficit, Gold's Law may be stated:

I minus E equals S; but E minus I equals D.

I know that it sounds revolutionary, but I have personally proved its truth by many years of deficit financing.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Medical science has now reduced the average stay of a patient at Children's Hospital to 7 days.

But agency allowances run about $5 per day less than the cost of treating the patient—making an average deficit of $35 per child.

Now that you're struggling with your income tax return, I thought you might like to know these things because contributions to Children's Hospital are "deductible." Think of all the money you can save on next year's taxes.

ADD DEFINITIONS

Bill Houston of 4015 71st ave., Landover Hills, Md., seems to be slightly disenchanted with the current edition of the Nats. He offers the definition:

"Baseball is what used to be played at Griffith Stadium years ago."

MISCELLANY

Memo to officers of the District Line Club: Beryle Ferguson of 315 S. John st., Goldsboro, N. C., wants to know how an out-of-towner can become a member of the club... That's a toughie. I guess it boils down to a question of how she can come to Washington for a meeting some evening and still be "in Carolina in the morning" . . . With Sportscaster Bob Wolff moving to WWDC, his old beat on WINX will be patrolled by Jack Rowzie, who used to be a member of the Metropolitan Police Department . . . Harry M. Ryder of 418 Cumberland ave. has high praise for the courtesy and efficiency of the Capitol Police, and wonders if they wouldn't have an easier time of helping out-of-towners find parking spaces if there were a 2-hour limit on parking on the Hill . . . Mrs. R. L. Gilbert of 6119 7th pl. nw. says it's too bad the antique dishes sent by Aunt Clara to Mrs. Smigel got smashed, but if it ever happens to you, don't despair. There are several places in town that repair china (no matter how badly smashed) and make it look almost new again . . . With all this talk of atom bombs and hydrogen bombs, Mrs. Howard D. Fritz of 650 I st. sw. tells me she wishes she could be a schoolgirl again . . . I guess half the people in Washington share that wish. But not me. I'd rather be a schoolboy.

Pun Fun

Capt. Richitt Maj. Barrett Maher

The caption writers missed a couple of good bets on these shots taken at the recent crime probe on Capitol Hill. For example, the smile on the face of Capt. Anthony Richitt, who told all, obviously called for the line: "Grin and Bare It." On the other hand, pictures of sober-visaged Daniel B. Maher and his friend Maj. Robert J. Barrett might have been titled: "Grim and Barrett."

KID STUFF

Mrs. Ernestine Edmonds of 99 Temple Village, Alexandria, Va., had just finished explaining the meaning of "The Lord is my shepherd" to her 7-year-old son when he piped up:

"I know who the biggest sheep in the flock is."

"Who?" asked Mrs. Edmonds.

"President Truman," replied the lad.

There's a boy who's a cinch to grow up to be a Republican.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Seven adorable fox terrier puppies, 6 weeks old." (Warfield 2696 after 7 p. m.)

"Lovely mother cat, 18 months old." (Trinidad 2453.)

OVERHEARD

"The floor show is okay, but I can't say much for the food. Their coffee is older than their liquor."

Negro History Urged for All Public Schools

Teaching of Negro history in all schools has been advocated by Dr. Philip T. Johnson, Negro member of the District of Columbia Board of Education.

Dr. Johnson, speaking at the membership campaign kick-off of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Sunday night said that he thought inclusion of Negro history in the curricula would afford white citizens a better understanding and appreciation of the history and achievements of the Negro people.

Dr. Ellis O. Knox, a representative for the United Citizens Association and a professor at Howard University, told those at the NAACP meeting that the proposal to transfer Cardozo students to Elliot Junior High School is "equally as unsatisfactory" as the Parkview transfer proposal.

Other speakers included Oliver W. Hill, Richmond City Councilman, who is a graduate of Dunbar High School and Howard University Law School.

The NAACP's campaign goal is 25,000 new members. Present membership is around 8000.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Truman Pushes School Aid Action

By Drew Pearson

In a recent conference with congressional "big four" leaders, the President made it bluntly clear that he expected them to finish passage of the Federal aid-to-education bill, which already has passed the Senate.

Pearson

"I'm depending on you to get a satisfactory bill through the House during this session," Truman told Speaker Sam Rayburn and House Majority Chief John McCormack.

The President added that he wouldn't attempt to dictate the terms of the bill regarding such controversial questions as free bus transportation for parochial students.

"The Democratic Party," he said, "has promised aid for our schools and I am determined that we will make good on that promise. You bring me a bill down here and I'll sign it."

Briefing Public

A plan to form a chain of aircraft spotters across the United States has been drawn up in the National Defense Department.

The idea is for the public to do less worrying and more preparing for possible atomic attack. To this end the general public will be briefed on how to escape danger and stop panic, while civilian minutemen will be trained in peace for possible duties in case of war.

One of these is a civilian aircraft warning net, stretching in an arc across 25 Northern States from North Carolina to California cutting across the middle of Illinois, Ohio and Indiana. Civilian volunteers will be trained, then kept on a stand-by basis at key posts to scan the skies for enemy planes. This is necessary to supplement our radar screen which hasn't been completed yet and has certain blind spots, anyhow.

The Navy has also been assigned to work with civilian authorities in order to throw a dim-out switch down the Pacific Coast as an emergency, antisubmarine measure. A similar program will be worked out later for the Atlantic Coast.

Face Unpleasantries

The plans being drafted include some unpleasant news, but military leaders believe they should be faced now.

In case of atomic attack, key civilians will be trained in each city to care for the dead and wounded and restore the city to emergency operation. Mobile units will also be trained to move into an atomic-blitzed city and aid local authorities. Biggest need will be a huge blood reservoir. Another problem concerns the present humanitarian concept of aiding most critical cases first. In mass destructions, it will be more important to concentrate on aiding those who have a better chance of surviving. This tragic problem is already under study by medical experts.

A huge national war game, testing military-civilian teamwork from coast-to-coast, is also proposed.

Food-Price Probe

The inside story behind high food prices will be brought out into the open today by courtly, white-haired Senator Guy Gillette, an Iowa dairy farmer whose subcommittee has been digging into skyrocketing prices of coffee, milk, bread, eggs, poultry and live stock.

Despite terrific pressure to stop his probe, Gillette will show that, while farmers' income is shrinking and consumers pay more, the middleman has been making more.

In January, 1949, for instance, the largest United States coffee importer, the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., paid 25 cents a pound for coffee and sold it for 47 cents. Ten months later A. & P. paid 28 cents a pound, but charged 65 cents.

Another big buyer, General Foods, raised its retail price from 51 cents to 76 cents a pound, although it paid approximately the same import price as A. & P.

Many of the big importers are members of the Sugar and Coffee Exchange, which were investigated after World War I because of the hike in sugar prices. Gillette investigators figure a sugar rise is in the cards now, unless the Senate's coffee probe scares it off.

Idaho Potatoes—Here are two interesting things about the potato surplus: 1. Idaho potatoes aren't glutting the market like Maine spuds. 2. Acreage quotas aren't going to limit the potato crop much. Farmers simply use more fertilizer. Maine farmers have now increased their yield to 450 bushels per acre, whereas the national yield is 211 bushels. Thanks to fertilizer and insect sprays, however, the national average next year will be 240 bushels. Meanwhile, top Idaho spuds have been selling for $2.75 to $3.50 per bushel while Uncle Sam is paying a support price of around $2 for surpluses. So it's not in Idaho that potatoes have been piling up.
